FOR SALE, the A1 copper-fastened splendid screw steamship CITY OF NORFOLK. This beautiful steamer may be expected in our harbour in the course of a few days, having already proceeded to Launceston for the purpose of fitting her screw. She is built entirely of white oak, very heavily timbered, strongly copper-fastened, and braced fore-and-aft, with diagonal iron braces, after the manner of Collin's celebrated New York and Liverpool line of steamers. Her accommodations are of the first class—the cabin saloons, and state-rooms being lofty, well lighted, and ventilated with large ports. She has ample room for fifty cabin passengers, and will, it is believed, compare in beauty, comfort, and convenience, with any steamer afloat of her tonnage. Her engines were built by the best makers in the United States, under the immediate inspection of William Sewell, Esq., Superintendent Engineer, of the United States Navy, who has had large experience in the construction of propeller engines, which is a sufficient guarantee of their strength and excellence. Her model is unexceptionable; her sailing properties speak for themselves; her log, on her passage out, showing frequent runs under canvas, of from 260 to 270 miles per day; whilst her unfailing regularity to day and hour during the whole of last winter, on the roughest portion of the American coast (Cape Hatteras) without a single accident, is a proof of what may be expected of her here. She is well found in sails, rigging, furniture, &c., and has all the requisites for security, comfort, and even luxury. She has also a duplicate screw, and duplicates of most of her machinery. Soon after her arrival at Sydney, she will make a trial trip, for the satisfaction of intending purchasers, when, if not sold, she will be put on, to run regularly, between this port and Melbourne. She is 572 tons register, and was built in Baltimore in the latter part of 1852.

HEALTH FOR THE MILLION.

EDWARD BACH'S Magnetic Universal Pill. London.

An approved remedy against all Hemorrhoidal disorders, Nervous complaints, all kinds of Fevers, Spasms, Pulmonary Complaints, Chronic Affections, Consumption, Melancholy, Herpetic Eruptions, Disorders of the Stomach, Interrupted Activity of the Skin, Weakness of the Eyes, Sleeplessness, &c.

It is too generally known what great sensation Vital Magnetism has made, in reference to its curative powers in the most varied and greatest sufferings of humanity, for the salutary effects of this method of cure to be called in question.

It is sufficiently proved that the communication of the Magnetic Vital Fluid is capable of removing the most obstinate maladies.

If now, the inventor of these pills has, after many years of study and reflection at last succeeded in connecting this fluid, so indispensable to life, and the health of every human being, with a vehicle, for the purpose of its being administered according to the requirements of the patient, it will then cease to be regarded as matter of marvel, if it is asserted here—"That by the agency of these pills, not only the above maladies can be subjugated and cured, but also the health and life of the individual be preserved, and invigorated to a prolonged period."

Facts have demonstrated that debilitated individuals, at the advanced age of 76, have perceived their complicated ailments to yield successively, and renewed manly vigour to follow, from a persevering use of the Magnetic Universal Pill.

This affirmation is most strikingly borne out by the fact, that the hair, which had turned grey on the head of persons at this advanced age, has gradually regained its original colour.

The sleeplessness incident to this advanced period of life changes by the virtues of these pills into refreshing and recruiting slumbers.

Any interrupted activity of the skin is speedily rectified, and the healthful exercise of its functions re-established.

All Rheumatic Pains are sure of removal by the use of this remedy.

All Hemorrhoidal disorders, even in the highest degrees, can be radically cured by the same.

Hypochondria by the use of this remedy is converted into a cheerful and placid feeling.

Persons suffering under Fever can re-establish their health by having recourse to this remedy.

The entire Nervous System acquires renewed vigour and vitality.

Nervous debility, whether originating in excessive indulgence, or the result of exhaustion from painful suffering, childbirth, &c., are sure of finding relief from these pills.

Spasms, of whatever denomination, will find cure from the Universal Pill.

Weakness of vision will infallibly be strengthened.

Disorders hitherto accounted cureless, as, Pulmonary and Stomach Complaints, Consumption, Melancholy, Herpetic Eruptions &c., have, as experience has shewn, been effectually checked by the use of these pills.

Mercury that has remained in the body for years, and which it is found so difficult to extrude, is infallibly removed by the use of the Universal Pill, the system being freed thereby from all noxious substances and acquiring renewed vigour.

With a view to securing the restorative effects above indicated, it is requisite to take 12 Pills daily the first week, 3 at a time at 4 equal intervals,—the second week, the like number at 3 equal intervals. 4 Pills each time, after which, if suiting, the dose may be apportioned to 6 Pills at night and 5 in the morning.

On the patient's becoming sensible of a feeling of relief, the cure will be greatly accelerated by his increasing gradually the dose from 12 to 24 Pills.

No one need fear any derangement in reference to his daily motions, as the operation of these Pills is neither purgative nor obstructive, but induces regulated evacuations.

Regular habits, strict abstinence from spirituous liquors, the copious drinking of good pure water, will greatly favour, while irregular living will much retard, the desired effect.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

BY the Anna Mary, now in the harbour, and by other vessels shortly to arrive, the undersigned will be in possession of a most ample stock of the above most popular remedies; and he trusts confidently, from the fresh arrangements made with Professor Holloway, that henceforth the Depôt will be so well supplied as to be ALWAYS able to execute the largest orders.

Under these circumstances the advertiser proposes to renew or to create SUB-AGENCIES in every town and district of New South Wales; and hereby invites communications from parties wishing to participate in the profits derived from the enormous sale of these valuable medicines. "Good wine needs no bush," and Holloway's world-renowned remedies require no puffing. In New South Wales it is now well understood that no "station" or gold diggers' camp is complete in its supplies without an ample stock of Holloway's Pills and Ointment. And no wonder! for the benefits conferred by these medicines are so great as almost to go beyond belief. The following statement, inserted in the Goulburn Herald of the 16th of April, is only a sample of the good effected among the community, not one in a thousand—perhaps even in ten thousand—thinking it worth while to take the trouble to return public thanks.

J. K. HEYDON,
Sole Wholesale Agent for New South Wales and Victoria.

To the Editor of the Goulburn Herald.

Dear Sir,—I wish to apprise you of a most miraculous cure that has just been effected by Holloway's Pills and Ointment on my son, a boy turned 14 years of age, who was attacked on the 5th of January last with a most dreadful pain in the chest, and a high fever. I bled and blistered him myself, but to no effect. I had then to send to Dr. Blake, of Yass, to see him, who prescribed and administered medicine to him, which gave him some temporary relief: but instead of curing the malady, it turned it to a far worse and more dangerous complaint the dropsy. Dr. Blake pronounced him to be dropsical on the 8th of February last, and that my only resource was to send him to the Yass hospital, as he needed daily attendance both from himself and Dr. Campbell, as he was doubtful whether he would survive or not. Under these circumstances I kept my boy at home, and, being advised, I went to Yass and purchased a supply of Holloway's medicines, and began on Ash Wednesday to administer them.

It acted according to the directions given in the pamphlets that are wrapped around the medicine boxes, with the exception that I gave the pills in larger doses than is there prescribed. In the middle of Lent the boy had swelled to such an extent in his belly and feet that I thought he would actually burst, and that I should be obliged to get him tapped; but I had confidence, and persevered in my humble prayers and medicine, and, wonderful to relate, thanks to God and to Holloway's medicine, he was as well as ever on the 27th March—Easter-day. He was cured in the space of seven weeks.

Now, Sir, I think it would be uncharitable in me, towards Professor Holloway, and also towards my neighbours, not to give these facts publicity. Mr. Hurley, of the Burrowa Steam Mills, Mr. O'Brien, of the Burrowa Inn, and scores of my neighbours, can vouch for the truth of those statements, and if necessary I will go forward before any magistrate and confirm this statement on my solemn oath.

I am, Sir your obedient humble servant,
JEREMIAH HOUGH,
Teacher of the R. C. School, Burrowa
April 7th, 1853.

PULVERMACHER'S Hydro-Electric Voltaic Battery.—The undersigned has just received one of the above, and will galvanize every afternoon, as usual, after 3 o'clock. The astonishing effects of this battery, both as regards its medical application and scientific uses, has drawn forth the highest encomiums from the most clever men of the day.
J. S. NORRIE, appointed agent, Pitt-street.

MESSRS. PRICE, FAVENC, AND GWYN would beg to direct the attention of the public to the ready-made clothing and men's mercery department, which is replete with every requisite required for gentlemen's, youths', and boys' wear, consisting of black cloth, frock, dress, paletot, Rochford, Oxonian, and Doncaster coats; alpaca, Russell cord, and grogram coats of all kinds; black, drab, and fancy doeskin trousers; doeskin, gambroon, and white and brown drill trousers; with an immense assortment of black and fancy silk and satin vests, Beaufort and Albert ties, bandannas, braces, gloves, &c. These goods have all arrived by the Constitution and Kate, and are in nice fresh condition.

In addition to the above they still make clothes to order in the best possible manner.

Price, Favenc, and Gwyn earnestly request that their customers would, before making their purchases, strictly observe their address, many of their friends having inadvertently bought their goods at a shop not far distant, with the window and door dressed and arranged in a similar manner, so that a stranger might readily mistake one for the other; and it is, from being informed of such mistakes having frequently occurred, that they are induced to insert this caution. The men's mercery is next to a gateway, which separates that from their Linen Drapery and Silk Mercery Department, and is number.
261, Pitt-street.

BE IN TIME!!!
Clearing out sale! Must be sold! Great reduction in the price of FURNITURE, &c.

PETER AND WILLIAM DEAN would advise those parties who intend to furnish to hasten at once to their extensive Furniture Mart, City Theatre, Market-street.

P. and W. D. know the public have lately held back from buying in consequence of the high prices which have been ruling; but they beg to state that their prices are now so far reduced as to enable all parties to receive really good value for their money.

The sale will continue until the whole stock is cleared out, offering inducements decidedly advantageous to all parties, especially UP-COUNTRY BUYERS.

BEAR IN MIND that the reduction is not a partial one, but general, upon every article, as Peter and William Dean are determined to give the public an opportunity of furnishing at something like a reasonable price.

AN EARLY CALL will ensure you abundance of choice from one of the first stocks in the colony.

THE Proprietor of the above establishment begs respectfully to inform his patrons that, in consequence of the number of dinners ordered to be provided on Sundays having increased so as to preclude the possibility of the many parties being served with that careful attention which, until now, has been the characteristic of the Hotel, he has determined to provide a general table, which he himself will have the honour to superintend, and which shall be handsomely supplied with the most desirable and suitable dishes. The dinner will be placed upon the table each Sunday, at two o'clock precisely.

Parties, in which there are ladies, may still be accommodated with private dinners. 6021

THE undersigned having just arrived from Valparaiso with a cargo of Barley, is desirous of introducing it as an article of food for horses and other cattle, in lieu of maize and oats, for which it will be found a valuable and cheap substitute.

The barley will be delivered at the ship's side, at the Queen's Wharf, in lots to suit purchasers (say not less than 50 bushels), at 7s. cash per bushel, of 50 lbs.

THE GOLD QUESTION.

The large quantities of gold which were obtained at California, and the still increased supplies from New South Wales and Victoria caused considerable excitement on Change both in London, and Paris, a few months ago. Several persons, well acquainted with the theory of finance, some of whom were timid and fearful of the consequences of the large influx of the precious metal, whilst others were bold and venturous,—gave to the world their opinions. We have several pamphlets before us, which from a press of other important matters, during the late sitting of Council, we had not time or space to notice. One of these is by Mr. Andrew Johnson, of the Bullion Office. This gentleman classifies the whole subject, and exhibits considerable knowledge of the argument. The notion that because gold is plentiful it must necessarily diminish in value, is thus treated by him:—

"It is surprising what a mass of confusion is exhibited by the prevalent notions upon this topic. Nothing is more common than such remarks as these: What is the Bank to do if it continues to buy gold at £3 17s. 9d. per oz. standard, when every day is lessening its value? Or again, 'If something be not soon done, and things continue as they are, the Bank must be ruined!'—and objectors are triumphantly referred to the recent change in the currency of France, where gold has to a great extent displaced silver, formerly the almost exclusive coin; but this instance no more applies to the real point at issue than ground exists for the fears it is intended to support. Such misapprehensions are best met by a contrary assertion, that shall be as startling as themselves; by this means men are forced into a consideration of the real facts involved, which they would not attend to if brought before them in a simply scientific form. Such an assertion I proceed to make in the hope that it may lead to such desirable consequences, and it is, that there is no fixed price for gold. 'What!' I can imagine will be exclaimed in a thousand quarters, 'no fixed price! Surely this man has forgotten Peel's Act; this is but another instance of the very confusion of ideas he complains of.' But what is price, if it be the money of the country? And how can the price of gold, which is our money, be determined by a relation to itself? How can the measure of the value of all other things be a measure to itself also? The fact is, that what is called the price of gold is merely an equivalency of denomination: £3 17s. 10½d. = 1 ounce standard gold, which is as much as to say that the price of a sovereign is a sovereign. Peel's Bill enacted that the Bank should give its notes for all gold that was offered them at £3 17s. 9d. per oz. standard, which was virtually giving the public that sum of coined money for gold of a like standard weight. How the Bank would possibly be injured by an operation which virtually gives them 1½d. per oz. for the trouble of sending the gold so bought, with their notes, to the Mint for gratuitous conversion into coin, and as a compensation for loss of time during the process, it is difficult to conceive, and has never been attempted to be explained by any of the terrorists who indulge in the remarks criticised. On the notes so parted with by the Bank being presented for repayment, the Bank returns for them, in sovereigns, the same weight of gold that was given for them, minus 1½d. per ounce on that weight, so that any variation that might have taken place during the interval in the value or exchange power of the gold by no means affects the Bank, they having made the profit provided in the Act, totally irrespective of any change that may have taken place in the mean time in the value of the gold.

"All these misconceptions rest upon a very common confusion of the notion of value with that of price, most distinct ideas, but most commonly used interchangeably by persons who have paid no attention to the theory or true facts of all mercantile transactions. A few lines back it was said that the Bank sent the gold to the Mint for gratuitous conversion into coin, and until very recently this was the case; but since the alterations at the Mint, a new regulation has been issued, which in some degree invalidates the absolute truth of this position. It was the case before Sir J. Herschel's appointment that the Mint gratuitously converted all gold into coin, whatever might be its quality; but since that time a charge is made upon all gold that is less fine than standard, to cover the expense of refining such gold, or bringing it up to that degree of purity which will fit it for coinage. This expense used to be borne by the nation, together with the other expenses of the coinage, but is now of course a charge upon such persons as sell gold below the standard fineness, and to that extent limits the general position that the public can require of the Bank £3 17s. 9d. for each ounce of standard gold that they present to it."

"It is imagined by many that if the Bank were not forced by the Act of Parliament to give £3 17s. 9d. for every ounce of standard gold presented to it, the great increase in the supplies of that metal would enable the Bank to purchase it at a lower rate; but so long as the present Mint regulations continue, such a result could not ensue from any increase of the supplies however great. While gold is gratuitously coined at the Mint, the only difference between the Mint price £3 17s. 10½d. per ounce standard, and the market one is such a difference as will cover the interest upon the sum coined during the time it is detained in the Mint for that purpose; and the first effect of any offer on the part of the Bank of a less sum than £3 17s. 10½d. minus that difference would be, that the holders of gold bullion would take it to the Mint to be coined, instead of the Bank for notes. But why, it is often replied to such arguments as these, does the Bank stock of bullion so increase in its vaults, and why is money so cheap if it be not the direct consequence of the large increase in the production and importation of gold from California and Australia? A little reflection must show that the present state of the money market cannot be the result of so confined a cause as partial alteration or the form in which England receives her returns for commodities in the American and Australian markets. The present low rate of interest speaks simply of a past high rate of profit; the accumulations of all persons engaged in industrial pursuits have reached or touch upon that limit which renders their further employment in the various trades of which they are the result, no longer profitable, and such surplus capital as the trader can no longer invest advantageously in his own business, flows through the usual mercantile and banking channels into that general fund of capital seeking investment, which is usually called the money market, and the character of which is of course most strongly marked where the largest part of it exists, viz.—at the Bank of England. Such a state of trade of course presents comparatively few borrowers, and even those who do borrow are enabled to do so without applying to the Bank.

"If there were not at the present time a very full employment in all the great branches of national industry, the addition of a few millions to the stock of gold in the country would only enable the Bank to increase her issues, as the notes received for such gold at the Bank would remain in circulation, and thus bring those issues nearer to the limit allowed by her charter. That it is otherwise a fact full of congratulation to all but holders of Bank Stock, and a great testimony of the wisdom and general beneficence of recent changes in our system of trade, that have brought about such desirable results to all except those who are already rich, but wish to be richer. The only evils to be feared, in such a state of things, are such as flow from that impatience of immediate profit which cannot be separated from a large unemployed capital.

"Until new forms of industry arise, or until new channels are found for the distribution of the production of old firms, this state of things must continue, unless that impatience above alluded to should give rise to a reckless and speculative spirit, of which the evil effects have been so often before felt, but which seem to be the fate of too much prosperity.

"One very egregious plan has been proposed to do away with the imaginary evils attending the increase in the production of gold. The writer of a letter in the Times some time since proposed that the sovereign should be coined double its weight, lest this dreadful influx of precious metals should disorganise the prices of commodities; it is here proposed to revolutionise them at once, a revolution too of the worst kind, in the interest of all creditors, and to the utter destruction of all debtors. For it cannot be supposed, nor is it maintained, that gold has lost one-half of its exchange power; how much it has lost is perhaps beyond all human calculation; it may even be contended that it has not lost any. But granting for the sake of argument that it has done so, what human power would adjust the balance in such a complicated interest, if that power is to be applied from without, and on the means of exchange, while that adjustment is yet the most natural thing in the world if left to the inner forces of commerce itself, and is always an operation spread over so many years as to fall with the least possible inconvenience upon any whom it may affect."

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF EASTERN AUSTRALIA.

The Synod of Eastern Australia met within the Free Church, Pitt-street, Sydney, on Wednesday, the 2nd November, when the Rev. A. M. Sheriff, the retiring moderator, delivered a discourse founded on several verses of the third chapter of Ezekiel.

The Synod having been constituted by prayer, and the roll made up, there were found to be present the following members, viz., the Moderator, Rev. A. Salmon, of Sydney; Rev. C. Stewart, of Bowenfels; Rev. G. Mackie, of Kiama; Rev. William Lumsdaine, of Richmond; and Rev. W. Grant, ministers; and Messrs. Waugh, Little, Mackenzie, and Martin, elders.

The Synod then proceeded to the election of a Moderator, when the Rev. William Lumsdaine, of Richmond, was unanimously chosen, and having taken the chair, gave the following address:—

Reverend Fathers and Brethren,—If ever the occupant of the Moderator's chair stood in need of indulgence on the part of his co-Presbyters, it is the humble individual who, by your kind choice, has been placed into it on the present occasion. It is no light matter to preside over an assembly composed of members of mature experience and long standing in the ministry—for there are some sitting in this reverend court who have long borne the heat and burden of the day, while labouring in the Lord's Vineyard, who were personally engaged in the ten years' conflict preceding the memorable disruption of May, 1843, and who subsequently formed a part of that heroic and self-denying band, who counted all things but loss for the sake of the Redeemer's Crown rights, and the spiritual independence of his Church. We meet this day under peculiarly favourable circumstances. We are gratified in witnessing those amongst us whose hearts the Lord has inclined to devote themselves to this emphatically missionary field of labour, and who have come out to spend and be spent for Christ in this distant land. We cordially welcome these brethren from our Fatherland. Our hearts are encouraged and hands strengthened by their arrival to our shores, as the harvest still is great, while the labourers are few; and our hope and confidence is that the Lord will open a door of extensive usefulness to them, and render them the honoured instruments of building up the walls of our beloved Zion, of lengthening her cords, and strengthening her stakes in this portion of the southern hemisphere. Fathers and Brethren,—suffer a word of brotherly exhortation. We know that union is strength; while on the other hand, a kingdom divided against itself cannot stand. Let us then present to the world the happy spectacle of an united Church; its office-bearers and people striving together for the extension of the Gospel, influenced in all our operations by one common aim—the glory of a redeeming God, in the salvation of immortal souls, and endeavouring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. Then shall it be said of us, "See how these brethren love one another." Again, as one of the characteristic features of the disciples of the world is, "All seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's," so let the prominent features of our ministerial career be the striking reverse of this. "These seek not their own, but the things which are Jesus Christ's." Oh, to be completely emptied of self. Oh, for a single eye to God's glory, and devotedness of heart and life to God's service. In the various matters that may come under discussion, let us enter upon the deliberation of them in a calm and prayerful spirit; while giving expression to our opinions, let us bear in mind the apostolic saying, "Speaking the truth in love," and if compelled, through conviction, to take different views, let us agree to differ. May the Master of Assemblies grace our assembly—may He vouchsafe to us the spirit of wisdom, of love, and of a sound mind, and overrule all our deliberations for the advancement of His glory, and for the good of our beloved Church. Let us now proceed to the solemn duties before us, remembering that although we are insufficient of ourselves to do anything as of ourselves, our sufficiency is of God—His grace will be made sufficient for us, and the strength of Omnipotence will be perfected in human failings, infirmities, and weakness. Accept my thanks for choosing me your Moderator. May God enable me to discharge the duties connected with the office in such a manner as will meet the approval of the great Head of the Church, and secure the confidence of my brethren in the ministry.

After the Moderator's address, the Synod proceeded to receive the following ministers, viz., Rev. Alexander M'Intyre, Arthur Paul, Hugh M'Kail, and Archibald Cameron, recently arrived from the Free Church of Scotland, who, having produced their commissions, which were read by the clerk, and having received the right hand of fellowship from the Moderator and all the brethren, took their seats as members of Court.

The evening diet was spent in devotional exercises, conducted by the Moderator and the Rev. A. Salmon, and in several matters of routine.

THURSDAY, THE 3RD INSTANT.

The forenoon of Thursday was spent in receiving several reports from the clerk, and other members of synod, and in the examination of presbytery records, after which the court took up the case of the Rev. W. R. M'Leod, late of Moreton Bay, who laid upon the table his resignation as a minister of this church. Mr. M'Leod stated that finding from his enfeebled state of health he was totally incapacitated for ministerial duty, he had, on the recommendation of his medical attendants, resolved on taking a voyage to England for the benefit of his health. The synod agreed to record the expression of their heartfelt sympathy with Mr. M'Leod, under the sore affliction with which it has pleased the Almighty but most gracious Lord to visit him, and their deep sorrow that his ministerial career of usefulness and success, so auspiciously begun, should so soon have been terminated. The synod's earnest prayers and warmest wishes will be with their youthful brother, and he carries with him their high esteem and warm affection.

The committee on the insurance of the lives of ministers, gave in their report, which the synod approved of, recommending that the sum to be insured on the life of each minister be £500, and that to ensure regularity, uniformity, and certainty, the premiums be paid out of the Sustentation Fund before division among the ministers.

The model title deed was laid before the synod in a state of preparation for revisal, and was remitted to a committee to take legal advice.

The synod directed the Rev. A. M'Intyre to labour within the bounds of the presbytery of Maitland.

In the evening several interesting reports were given in to the synod, regarding those districts of the country applying to have ministers of this synod settled among them, viz., the Manning River, Bathurst and Carcoar, Moreton Bay, Shoalhaven, Wollongong, and New England. Rev. A. M. Sheriff laid on the table of the synod a requisition from the Presbyterians of the Manning River, earnestly requesting that a minister be sent to labour among them. Two calls in favour of the Rev William Grant—the one from Shoalhaven, and the other from Wollongong—were also laid upon the table. Parties having been heard, the synod deferred giving judgment till the following day.

FRIDAY, THE 4TH INSTANT.

On Friday the consideration of the calls was resumed, and the Synod agreed to remit the whole case to the Presbytery of Sydney. Mr. Grant not feeling at liberty to accept any call at so early a period after his arrival in the colony.

The Synod appointed the Rev. Arthur Paul to labour in Sydney, and remitted to the Presbytery to make all suitable arrangements with the view of forming a second congregation in Sydney in connection with this Church.

The Convener of the Committee on Education gave in a verbal report, of which the Synod approved, and instructed the Committee to correspond with the Free Church of Scotland, with the view of securing the services of several efficient teachers.

Spheres of labour for the next three months were appointed to the following gentlemen, viz.:—The Rev. W. Grant to return to Shoalhaven and Wollongong for a few weeks, and afterwards to proceed to the Manning River, and the Hunter River districts; Rev. A. Cameron to proceed first to the Manning River, and then to the Hunter River districts; and the Rev. Hugh M'Kail to proceed to Penrith, Bathurst, and Carcoar.

A commission of Synod was appointed to receive the ministers still expected to arrive, and appoint them spheres of labour, as also to those ministers not inducted into a charge till the meeting of Synod in May.

The General Treasurer read and laid upon the table his financial report for the past six months, from which it appeared that the contributions to the Sustentation Fund from the several congregations amounted to £689 18s 11d. This sum affords to each of the six ministers at present on the fund a dividend for the half-year of £108 16s. 6d., exclusive of the premium on the life of each of these ministers, which sum the Synod ordered to be paid to them accordingly. The Synod unanimously agreed to record their warmest thanks to their Treasurer, Mr. Buyers, for his zealous and disinterested labours on their behalf. The following is the Treasurer's Financial Report for the half-year ending the 31st October, 1853:—

WILLIAM BUYERS, General Treasurer.

SATURDAY, THE 5TH INSTANT.

On Saturday, Mr. Beard, from Penrith, appeared on behalf of the Presbyterians of that town and neighbourhood, stating their anxiety for a minister from this Church, and requesting, that if possible, a minister may be settled there soon. The Moderator made several statements in confirmation of what Mr. Beard had said. The Synod expressed their deep anxiety of complying with this request as soon as in their power, and agreed in the meantime, to give a service at Penrith, every second Sabbath for the next three months.

The Rev. Mr. Salmon then gave a verbal report of his visit, by appointment of the Synod, to New England, along with the Rev. Mr. Maxwell, stating that everywhere throughout the district, Mr. Maxwell was most cordially received and welcomed, and laid upon the table an invitation from the people of New England to Mr. Maxwell, to exercise the ministry among them, which was sustained by the Synod; Mr. Salmon also stated, that owing to the great distance between New England and Sydney, and Mr. Maxwell's great anxiety to commence operations in his district, he had seen it his duty not to come to this meeting of the Synod, with which explanation they declared themselves satisfied.

The Synod agreed, that an especial service connected with Mr. Maxwell's induction, be held in the Free Church, Pitt-street, on Monday evening at 7 o'clock.

MONDAY, THE 7TH INSTANT.

On Monday evening, the Synod met, pursuant to adjournment, when the Moderator opened the service connected with the induction of the Rev. Andrew Maxwell, by engaging in devotional exercises; after which the Rev. Alexander Salmon delivered an appropriate discourse, founded on the first Epistle to the Corinthians, the 3rd chapter, the 21st and first part of the 22nd verses; after which, the Rev. W. Grant implored the Divine blessing on the formation of the pastoral tie, and commended the brother and his flock, to the care and direction of the Great Head of the Church. The business of the Court being now over, the Moderator delivered the following concluding address:—

"Reverend Fathers and Brethren,—With the good hand of God upon us, the labours of our Synod have again come to a close. They have been the labours of fallible men; but feeling our liability to err in judgment, we have, in consulting about the affairs of Christ's Kingdom, earnestly sought to be guided by the wisdom that cometh from above. Having met together in the name of Christ, and invoked his presence amongst us, I trust we have been enabled to realize the fulfilment of that assurance—"Where two or three are met together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." The harmonious feeling and peaceable spirit which has characterised this meeting of Synod, must have given satisfaction to every member of this reverend Court. Another pleasing and highly encouraging feature of our present sitting, and one which attaches considerable importance to it, is the large accession to our numbers. Four additional ministers have joined our ranks: some of these brethren have been engaged in ministerial duty in the colony for the last three months, and already proved themselves to be workmen needing not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth; and we have no doubt that those more recently arrived will soon be a source of great strength to our beloved Church. The impressive services connected with the induction of one our brethren in the New England district have added much solemnity to our meeting, which solemnity has been enhanced by the affecting farewell, which one of our number, through ill health, has been compelled to take of us. The Lord has laid his chastening hand upon our dear brother—we greatly deplore his unavoidable resignation and departure from us; however, for all-wise ends, it is the Lord's doing, and we must bow to His will. And now my fellow labourers in that work of faith and labour of love, committed unto us by the great Head of the Church, in dismissing you to your respective charges, let me affectionately commend you to God and to the word of His grace. Let us be instant in season and out of season in doing the work of evangelists, and making full proof of our ministry. Let us aim like Apollos, to be mighty in the Scriptures, so that we may bring out of the divine treasury things new and old, for the edifying of the body of Christ: in order to this much diligent study of the word is necessary, accompanied with earnest prayer for the teaching of the Spirit of Truth. Oh, dear brethren, let us seek to be taught of God, so that we may be apt to teach others. Let us exemplify in our walk and conversation the sacred truths which we bring before our people, and thus preach by example as well as precept. While watering the garden of the Lord, let us seek to have our own souls watered, and kept in a prosperous state: personal growth in grace and a high standard in spiritual attainments must not be lost sight of in the execution of our public duties. Further, while we firmly hold and uncompromisingly maintain our distinctive principles of Free Churchmen, let us cherish brotherly love to all the disciples of the Saviour, by whatever name they are known amongst men, and be ready to co-operate with ministers of other evangelical sections of the Church of Christ, in promoting the cause of our common Christianity, and furthering the interests of the Redeemer's universal kingdom. Let ours be the magnanimous catholicity of the Gospel, "Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity." And now, fathers and brethren, let us return to our several districts, to serve God in the gospel of His Son. Oh, to be more faithful to our divine Lord and Master—oh, to be more faithful to the souls of those over whom the Holy Ghost hath made us overseers, and over whom we have to watch as those that must give an account. May the Lord strengthen us in body and soul for the onerous duties devolving upon us, and accompany our messages from the pulpit, and exhortations from house to house, with the life-giving power of his spirit, so that numbers may be converted under our ministry, and, when called upon to render an account of our stewardship to the great Shepherd of the sheep, we may be enabled to say, concerning many souls, won to Jesus through our instrumentality. Behold, here am I, Lord, and the spiritual children which thou hast given me. And now brethren go in peace, and may the God of peace and love be with you. Amen.

The Moderator then intimated that the business of the Synod was concluded, appointed its next half-yearly meeting to take place in the Free Church, Pitt-street, Sydney, on the first Wednesday of May next, being the fifth day of that month, and pronounced the benediction.

THE DETERIORATED CONDITION OF OUR SADDLE-HORSES.

(From the Illustrated London News.)

Under this title an interesting and important pamphlet has just been published by Messrs. Hatchard. The author writes with the authority of an experienced cavalry officer, through whose hands, or under whose inspection, a very considerable number of horses are annually passing. England has long been famous for the possession of breeds of horses unrivalled for beauty, for swiftness, for size, and power; equally fitted for luxury and labour, for war and chase, for harness and equitation. For centuries we have prided ourselves on the possession and the cultivation of these noble animals; for more than two hundred years we have pursued their improvement with an ardour in which love of the animal has been combined with the commercial spirit which forms so marked a feature in the English character. We are almost the only settled and civilised race in whom the passion for horse exercise is found pervading both sexes, and all ages and conditions of life, with little less fervour than among the nomad tribes of the plains of Tartary, the deserts of Arabia, or the pampas of South America. In Spain, in Germany, and in France, the wealthy and the military ride as a matter of state and fashion, and that chiefly when they are young; the humbler classes rarely, except as part of their occupation; and the aged and the dignified seldom, except when compelled for need of other means of conveyance. But with us aged peers, reverend bishops, learned judges, careful bankers, authors and artists, physicians, and barristers, set an example, which runs down to the butcher's boy and the costermonger.

Among the early signs of success, in the errand-boy become a merchant or a prize-fighter grown into a publican, the most frequent is to be found in a horse. The celebrated Jack Langan's ambition was completed, when he grew wealthy, by a white hat and a big horse. As England is one of the few civilised countries in which people ride for the sake of the pleasure of riding, and not for state or fashion, so it is naturally one of the countries in which children of all ranks ride at a very early age. There is no such word as pony in any other language, than the English. While the French boy is beating a miniature drum, or flourishing a tin sabre, the English boy is caracolling on a horse-headed stick, or mounted on a broad-backed Sheltie "a world too wide for his short shanks."

It would require a very rapid increase in horse-breeding to supply the constantly-growing demand of such a nation as ours, if no causes were at work to check the supply. But it so happens that, large as is the demand for live horse-flesh, the demand for dead mutton is considerably greater, and the supply of it a more profitable transaction. We have no exact statistics of either the one or the other; but the result of all our inquiries leads to the conclusion that thousands of acres formerly devoted to horse stock or oats are now covered with turnips and sheep.

An increased price will soon cure any deficiency in the supply of horses; but price alone cannot create quality. It is the opinion of the author of the work before us that the English saddle-horse is, and has been for some time, deteriorating in constitution and in powers of endurance. He gives his reasons for this belief; and they are worth consideration. He takes the cavalry as an example. He asserts that, even during the Penisular War, the expense of keeping up our cavalry, from the delicacy of our horses, was "intolerable." That, in the useful qualities, they were inferior to the French cavalry. The late Lord Harcourt told him, in 1826, that the 15th and 16th Regiments of Light Dragoons, which went with him to America, exhibited an union of strength and activity unknown at the time he was speaking; and yet the cavalry horses of 1826 were much better than they are at present.

At the Encampment at Chobham the horses are covered in at the picket-post; while at the encampment at Weymouth, in 1805, horses tied to the picket-post in the open air were kept in the finest condition. This housing of the cavalry at Chobham is one of the many proofs of the deterioration of our horses:—"The Life Guards in Spain had a large portion of their men dismounted by the horses getting sore backs, while only marching up the country to join the army; and a few years afterwards the 1st Life Guards suffered from the same cause in only marching from London to Nottingham.

We have, according to the showing of the author, an expensive force of cavalry mounted on horses unequal to the weight they have to carry, liable to sore backs after a short march, so tender that a brief exposure to the vicissitudes of a campaign would decimate them, and so weak in their legs and feet that a series of moderate marches would render a large proportion useless from lameness. If we turn from cavalry to saddle horses, we are pressed by the difficulty of finding animals which are at once active and enduring.

The deterioration of our cavalry and of our saddle-horses may be traced to causes—to one of which our author scarcely alludes. We have no longer the large class of useful horses from which our cavalry was drafted before good turnpike roads and railroads put an end to travelling on horseback.

As we have no breeding establishments like those maintained in France, the German States, and Russia, we obtain our horses from private breeders. As long as there was a large demand for good roadsters, there was a large supply, and from this supply the cavalry were easily mounted. But the demand does not exist. Road travelling with saddle-bags has ceased. Pack horse travelling has ceased. Road-gig driving has almost past away. Stage-coaches are things of the past generation.

There is no sure demand now for an animal which has not beauty, fashion, and showy action, as well as face. Not one half-bred colt in ten, probably not one in fifty, will make a hundred guinea park hack: the remainder, which might formerly have made plain roadsters, from the diminution of road and coach travelling, are almost unsaleable. Breeders confine themselves to thorough-breds for the turf, of which we shall presently say something; to cart-horses, which, when good, have qualities exactly the reverse of backs; to harness horses, which must be too large to make good saddle horses; and to hunters, which may be excellent with faults which would utterly condemn them as roadsters. A big horse can always be sold for a brougham, or a family cruelty-van, or an omnibus; or if black, for a hearse. But a stable full of compact roadsters of the old school, that would travel for weeks, carrying fourteen stone, twenty-five to thirty miles a day without being sick or sorry, would scarcely fetch £30 a piece all round, unless they had that showy action and elegant form which are admired in the parks.

But there is another reason for the deterioration of our cavalry horses on which the author dilates at some length, and with effect. We have increased the size and the speed of our racehorses, while diminishing the weights they carry, at the expense of their constitutions and powers of endurance. As yearlings they reach fifteen hands and a-half; at two years old they race; at three they acquire the reputation which makes them stud horses; at four they break down, or, if they survive are considered old at six; and are then usually withdrawn to raise stock as swift for a short distance and as feeble in constitution as themselves. With this early maturity have come a host of diseases unknown to horses reared in a more natural state.

Races are now arranged to suit the capacity of the modern feeble race.

By a quotation from the late Mr. Smith's work on breeding for the turf we learn that between 1718 and 1764, races were usually run on distances of four to six miles. We hear of a horse called Exotic, who commenced running in 1760 and continued on the turf until the year 1767. During this period he won eighteen times, and in his seventh year on the turf won a race of four mile heats at Peterborough. We have no such enduring horses in our time except Mr. Mytton's Euphrates, who did not commence running on the turf until he was seven years old. Cartouch, another horse of the same period as Exotic, was only fourteen hands high; but it was supposed that no horse was able to run him carrying twelve stone weight. Black Chance ran from 1737 to 1744, winning five times in one season—at Guildford, Salisbury, Winchester, Lewes, and Lincoln, every race four miles, and every race contested.

If we turn from these and similar records of the constitution and powers of racehorses of the last century to carry heavy weights through four-mile heats, to their portraits, as handed down to us by Seymour and other artists, we find an explanation of their powers in their "short legs, deep bodies, wide hips, and strong loins." Whenever horses of the same stamp are bred now, they are found too slow for our short races, made hunters, and we lose the benefit of their lasting stock. The racehorses of the present day are many of them lame before starting for their first race: others are rendered so for life by running a short race like that called "The Derby." Nearly all are, more or less, infirm from their birth, "knuckling in their pastern joints before they have done an hour's work." They exhibit straight shoulders to an extent unknown to our turf so late as thirty years ago. The young stock show, from their earliest years, constitutional weakness. They cannot move about for some days after they are born. The foals of other breeds move about as soon as dropped. They are forced on as much corn as they can eat, and for the first twelve months the whole milk of a cow is devoted them.

Their weak constitutions are the effect of breeding, without regard to the principles of form, from those animals which acquire a fleeting reputation on the turf. These winners are few in number; and the consequence is, breeding in and in, which accounts for the prevalence of the defects we have recited.

The growing weakness of our racehorses has been met by giving them less to do. The great race of the year is a three-year-old race; and after three years, weights are so multiplied on a winning horse as to render a long career impossible. "To the Jockey Club, or gentlemen who breed racehorses, it matters not what is the character of their horses as a whole, each individual, desiring only to have the best of that whole; and they are content to see their horses lose every quality but speed."

So far we have gone with the author; but when we come to consider his remedies, we can no longer follow his line.

He very justly concludes that to breed hacks for moderate speed, long endurance, and firm healthy legs and feet, no stock are equal to well selected Arabs. This has been proved in Prussia, where the breed, deteriorated by crosses with the large delicate English blood horse, has been restored by the introduction of superior Arabs. We cannot show anything like the performance of the Prussian mountain artillery, which charges up and down places apparently inaccessible to horses without guns. In like manner, in Australia, where great size is not required, and the chief market is found in the Indian cavalry, it is well known that the best stock has been produced by crossing the Arab with the English blood-mares. And, although the Arabs introduced have rarely been of the first class, the performances of the colonial horses on long journeys, at a high rate of speed, have equalled the best work of our ancestors' famous hackneys. There are well-authenticated instances of two hundred miles having been done on grass by colonial horses in three days; while, in drawing Indian artillery, the English imported horses were utterly defeated in competition with the produce of Australia. Shropshire long possessed a superior class of hunters, crossed with Arabs; introduced by the great Lord Clive. But it is quite hopeless to expect that, as a matter of speculation, the general class of breeders will make use of Arab blood, from which they are not likely to derive any benefit in less than two or three generations. As Arabs are usually small, and not likely to breed either racers, or hunters, or carriage-horses, such experiments must be left to enthusiasts among noblemen and gentlemen, among whom correct principles of breeding may eventually make way.

At present the breeding of race and almost all other horses is conducted on purely empirical principles. A stud horse is chosen because he is the fashion. Those points are carefully studied in selecting pure bred bulls, or rams, and are rarely considered in breading a colt. The short-horn, or South Down breeder, seeks to amend the faults of the cow or ewe by corresponding merits in the bull or ram. The breeder of the race-horse, which is the very foundation of our hunters and hacks, looks for such blood as will make his yearlings sell well. As for the ordinary run of breeders of half-bred horses, chance and fancy direct the selection of stallions.

The author of the work which has formed the text of our remarks desires to see premiums for enduring horses offered in the shape of Queen's Plates, to be run for in long distances, at heavy weights, without regard to age. We have little faith in any such remedy, unless it be in Ireland, where the usual stakes are insignificant, the tastes of the people for sport strongly developed, and the country peculiarly suited for horse-breeding. Here the stakes in all the great races, and the speculations of betting, reduce Plates and Cups to insignificance. We must trust rather to the general diffusion of instruction in the true principles of form and of breeding. Few know what is the appropriate form of a horse intended to gallop, and for a horse intended to draw,—fewer still how to secure the greatest probability of a well shaped foal by choosing sire and dam. Yet these things can be taught. If they were taught, we should not see well-bred horses crossed with cart-horses.

It would be well to teach our infant ploughmen the points of a good cart-horse from models, as compared with the points of a good hackney or hunter, as well as the principles of draught. In like manner, the anatomy of the horse should form part of the instruction of farmers' sons. If it did, the influence would soon rise to the higher classes, and whenever cavalry subalterns, as well as field-officers are, as a body well informed as to what a good road-horse ought to be, the condition of our regiments will improve. At present, we are ruled by fashion. There is no commercial demand for the class of horses required by the cavalry. Our breeders are not sufficiently well-informed to know that we should always be trying to amalgamate the loins and quarters of a Crucifix mare with the perfect forehand of a Touchstone.

We can hope for nothing from government interference; we must trust to educating the horse-breeding and horse-buying public; and it will take some time to do that. In the mean time we commend to the Education Committee of the Privy Council, and to the School of Design, at Marlborough-house, the advantage of circulating through the country models of the points which produce powers of draft. The lecture on the horse would be both popular and profitable in country schools.

WAR OR PEACE!

(From the Times.)

"There are two things," says an English historian, "which are always popular in the beginning; the first is a war, and the second is a peace." We believe this to be true; and for much of the war spirit just now visible we are no doubt indebted to our national propensity to novelty and excitement. A war is popular just as a new Ministry is popular, or a new King, or a new preacher, or a new dance, or a new delusion. Why a peace is popular we need not, perhaps, trouble ourselves to explain; but what is most remarkable just now is, that the war-cry issues most loudly from those very classes which have pretended to a monopoly of pacific and economical sentiments. We exposed at the time of the peace mania Mr. Cobden's unwarrantable assumption that war was the peculiar diversion of despotic Courts, and that the armaments of this country were only maintained for the satisfaction of aristocratic caprices. We appealed to experience in proof of the fact, that for one war which had been declared in the personal interest of Sovereigns, six at least in modern times had been occasioned by popular unreason or excess. That our views were correct we felt entirely assured, but we did not, we confess, anticipate so immediate an opportunity of verifying our assertions as that which presents itself this morning. A disturbance, as everybody knows, has occurred in our relations with Russia, and war, in fact, has become no very improbable contingency. At this crisis of affairs designs are entertained of forcing a more warlike and less conciliatory policy upon her Majesty's Ministers; and from what quarter does the reader imagine these conceptions proceed? They proceed not from any clique of "aristocrats;" not from those military clubs which Mr. Cobden stigmatizes as the hotbeds of international feuds; not from agriculturists, looking askance at the corn-markets; not from Protectionists, desirous of embroiling the operations of Free Trade; but from one of the most democratic, economical, and peace-preaching communities of the United Kingdom. They proceed from one of Mr. Cobden's own model constituencies—a constituency 20,000 in number, including an infinity of £10 householders, and invariably exercising its franchise in favour of the rarest Radicals to be found. The war-cry is sounded, in short from the metropolitan borough of Marylebone; the "pressure from without" is to be exerted against a Government considered not too warlike, but too pacific; and the very platforms which have been echoing these five years with abuse of the army and complaints of the estimates are now to ring with clamours for instant war, and scoffs at the sneaking unmanly policy of "arbitration."

That the reader may assure himself of the fidelity with which we are representing facts, we subjoin entire the document on which our observations have been founded. It was sent us with a request that we would give publicity to the circumstances announced in any manner we thought expedient, and, in our opinion, the most instructive course is that which we here pursue. Thus runs the communication:

We understand that a public meeting of the inhabitants of the borough of Marylebone is about to be held, with a view to test the state of public opinion upon the aggressive course Russia is now pursuing towards Turkey. Looking at the composition of the English Cabinet, and the manner in which Parliament has been silenced on this subject, some movement on the part of the public seems doubly necessary, as the absence of a resolute determination on the part of our Ministers to repel the first invasion of the territory of our ally has no doubt aided the Northern Autocrat in deciding on his course, and has, consequently, materially increased the danger of our being plunged into a war which we can avoid neither with safety nor with honour, and the end of which no one can foresee. It is expected that other constituencies will also meet for a similar purpose, should Ministers suffer any longer doubt to exist with regard to their intentions."

We suppose it was some misgiving respecting their own consistency which induced these "influential gentlemen of Marylebone" to give such a turn to their concluding sentence as might save their peace-making honour. After denouncing, however, "the aggressive course of Russia, the invasion of the territories of our ally," and the weakness which omitted to "repel" this invasion at the first moment of its occurrence, it is rather too audacious to talk about the "danger of war" thereby incurred. In the private communication, too, which accompanied the advertisement, it was distinctly stated, as the object of the proposed meeting, that "an end should be put to the uncertainty existing with regard to the probable course of her Majesty's Ministers." Now, in respect to the nature of this course there is no uncertainty whatever. Everybody not only understands, but as Mr. Bright himself acknowledged, is most profoundly convinced, that Ministers are straining every point to escape the contingency of war. In accord with the French Government, they are putting the most lenient construction on the movements of the Russian armies, are endeavouring to consider a casus belli as otherwise than a cause of war, and are notoriously anxious to bring the embroilment to a close without collision, and with as little offence as possible to the honour of either party. These are the "intentions" which are so displeasing to the Marylebone peacemakers. It follows, therefore, of necessity that they must desire one of two things—either that Russia should be left to do exactly as she pleases, without any hindrance at all, or that she should at once be brought to account by British cannon. Which of these is the real purpose of the manifesto the reader is not likely to doubt after perusing its contents. The object of the projected meeting is to bully Lord Aberdeen into assuming an attitude of uncompromising and peremptory defiance.

The simple truth of all this is, that our democratic peacemakers have no kind of objection to war when it is carried on in furtherance, as they conceive, of their own particular principles. The Emperor of Russia—or, as this very document styles him, "the Northern Autocrat"—is especially hateful to all true believers in the Charter and the Ballot, and it is fancied that the present opportunity of dealing him a blow is far too good to be lost. We had a specimen of this feeling in the case of M. Kossuth, whom at least 18 out of every 20 professed peacemakers desired to back up with the bayonet. The tendency is now still more strongly marked, and it has become manifest that not a few of our popular orators are actuated by personal feeling rather than public principle. Our Radical politicians look not to act themselves, but to the cause in which they are committed. If General Haynau had earned his atrocious character in an invasion of Russia at the head of a Polish legion, he might have flogged all the women between Smolensko and Moscow, and been received here as a hero after all.

We take the liberty, however, of reminding our Marylebone friends that war is war, on whatever grounds it is waged. If it unhappily becomes necessary to resort to arms in keeping the peace of Europe, we must bear our part; and we may, perhaps, succeed in curbing the pretensions of the offender. But the event itself, in a social or financial point of view, will be just as costly and as calamitous as if we had gone to war for purposes of pure aggression. We do not profess ourselves the advocates of "peace at all price." There are prices at which peace would be too dearly purchased, and at which, indeed, it would not ultimately prove to have been purchased at all. But we do say—as we have said on every occasion—that, while it is imperatively necessary to maintain and organize our resources, we cannot well be too slow in bringing those resources into action, and that no question so inexpressibly momentous as that of war or peace should be affected by the impulses of political prejudice or popular passion.

PASSIONATE MEN.—Men in a passion should be treated like kettles—when they boil over, they should be taken off.

DEFACING THE COIN.—A government bill was printed on Thursday, to prevent the defacing the current coin of the realm. Any persons stamping names or words on coin shall, in England or Ireland, be guilty of a misdemeanour, and in Scotland of a crime or offence, and liable to a fine or imprisonment, at the discretion of the court. A tender of coin so defaced is not to be a legal tender, and any person tendering or uttering such coin will be liable, before two justices, to forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 40s.

THE TRADE OF MAURITIUS.

The Commercial Gazette of the 6th September says—The value of exports from Great Britain during the first five months of 1853 tells a tale of unheard-of commercial progress; it shows an augmentation of nearly eight millions of pounds sterling, or an increase of about one-fourth; the revenue during the same time has surpassed the expenditure by nearly two millions of pounds sterling; and looking at the demand prevailing for British manufactures, even at advanced prices, caused by the rise in wages and high freights, there is every reason to hope for a continuance of commercial activity which will naturally tend to keep up the price of our staple. The scarcity of shipping is general, and until time is allowed to construct new vessels for the increasing wants, high rates of freights must be submitted to in every part of the world. In our number of yesterday we announced that twenty-six emigrant vessels were fitting out at Liverpool for Australia of 16,309 tons, and six had left that port the week ending 23rd July. In London this number was far exceeded.

From a list we published yesterday it will be seen that there are twenty-six vessels expected here from Great Britain, but many of them will not be here in one and some not in two months. From Calcutta twenty-two vessels are announced; few of them will take cargo, and we cannot help remarking that the prospects are not only that freights will be high, but that shipments will probably be retarded for want of tonnage. As exchange also promises to rule low, and provisions, &c., are generally dear, we question whether the increased production of this year will leave a larger net revenue to the colony than that of last.

However, there are several ways in which we can aid ourselves. The banks, we trust, will see the policy of controlling the exchange instead of being seduced by a temporary profit. We have good reason to suppose that they will see the policy of coming to the assistance of the colony, especially as present rates leave a fair margin. Dock warrants will be the means of avoiding those sacrifices which were formerly made, when there was a want of tonnage or a want of buyers, and it is satisfactory to learn that as our position becomes known, specie, though in limited amounts, is being sent to relieve us from the coming pressure.

For many years the stocks of sugar in the different ports of Europe have not been so low as in June last. The Economist of the 18th of June gives a statement, from which we find that the stocks and deliveries during the first five months of 1852 and 1853 were as follows:—

	Deliveries in first 5 months.	Stocks.
	cwt.	cwt.
1852	4,960,000	3,315,000
1853	4,532,000	2,403,070

The total arrivals were as follows:—

	cwt.
1852	4,524,000
1853	4,160,000

From these figures it will be observed that the deliveries this year are far beyond the importations, and expectations from sugar-producing countries anything but large. Australia will take a considerable quantity from Manila and Siam, as well as from Mauritius, so that the increase of our production will not be felt by the English market. With regard to the high price of rice, of which we are such large consumers, all we can do is to make our wants known. It is to be regretted that colonial capital is not invested in a few vessels. A company with three or four good ships would always have the advantage of a freight at the market rate; the vessels would get quick despatch and would profit largely at times like the present. As capital accumulates let us hope that we shall see parties in the colony becoming ship-owners. Already the Marine Insurance Company has furnished safe investment for a considerable sum of colonial capital; why should we be without hardly any ship-owners in such a port as this, where commerce is its life blood?

IMPOUNDINGS.

BRAIDWOOD.—October 31. From Araluen: Light bay horse, black points, star in forehead, snip on nose, J near shoulder. Bay filly, black points, MF near shoulder. Bay horse, black points, small star in forehead, F near shoulder; damages 7s. 6d each. If the above are not released on or before the 2nd December, they will be sold. J. DAFFARN. 9s. 9d.

DAPTO.—October 29. From Mr. Marshall's land, Dapto: Spotted red and white cow, four years old; damages 3d. If not released she will be sold on the 24th November. J. NUNAN. 9s.

AUSTRALIAN AGRICULTURAL COMPANY.—A meeting of this Company took place this afternoon, when Mr. J. H. Ravenshaw was elected deputy-governor, and Mr. T. D. Edwards a director. In the course of the proceedings, the governor (Mr. Brownrigg) referred to the general position of the undertaking, and to the arrangements recently confirmed for the sale of the Peel River property. The coal mines, it was stated, were being progressively developed, and the sales in January and February had doubled those of the same period the last year. There had also been a fair demand for export, which it was considered would further increase. The price paid at the pit's mouth was 13s. 6d. per ton. The clip of wool, notwithstanding the difficulties experienced in connexion with labour, had been secured, and the quantity, amounting to about 650 bales, exhibited on the average no material change. The sales of live stock had greatly augmented, and in other respects the prospects were satisfactory. With the view of thoroughly testing the auriferous and general mineral resources of the company's possessions, the directors have, as already announced, despatched to the colony Mr. Odernheimer, an experienced German professor, whose report will be looked for with interest.—Times, July 21.

THE LITTLE GERMAN PRINCES IN TROUBLE.—Emigration to America is so rapidly carrying off the inhabitants of some of the southern German principalities, that the rulers are getting fearful they will have no one left to be ruled—no hardy peasantry to make up the Governmental revenue. They now propose an emigration tax, high enough to prevent their people from departing.

The Government brig sailed from here on Monday morning last for Auckland, having his Excellency Sir George Grey, Lady Grey, and suite on board. How long his Excellency intends to remain in Auckland before he takes his departure for Sydney and England, and whether or not he will first convene the General Assembly, are questions, we believe, involved in some uncertainty. We however suppose that, as far as Wellington is concerned, Sir George has at length taken his last leave, and has bid us a final adieu.—Wellington Independent, October 12.

The following vessels were loading at Kiapara on the 15th ultimo, for Melbourne and Sydney:—Signet, 531, Winter, for Melbourne; ready for sea. Sea Bird, 497, Cobban, for Melbourne; half loaded. Psyche, 260, for Sydney; nearly loaded. Sir Edward Paget, 482, Chapman, for Sydney; begun to load. Camilla, 383, Boyle, for Melbourne; going up the river.

The barque Commodore, Captain James Broadfoot, arrived on Wednesday, from Sydney, whence she sailed on the 28th ultimo. She encountered very heavy gales from the eastward, and a severe thunder storm passed over her; the Captain and one of his mates were thrown off their feet on the deck by the effects of the lightning, which for a few seconds appeared to wholly envelope the ship. 62 horses, and 160 head of horned cattle, were shipped at Sydney. A number of the horses were killed during the storm, 28 only of the number have been landed in safety, with 128 head of the cattle.—New Zealander, October 15.

H. M. S. Pandora, Captain Drury, sailed on Monday evening last, to resume her surveying operations on the East Coast, calling at Coromandel Harbour en route. The Pandora proceeds to the Bay of Plenty, and Hick's Bay, East Cape.—New Zealander, October 15.

The arrivals from Melbourne yesterday bring no later intelligence.

Captain Todd has come up from Melbourne in the Wild Irish Girl, and will resume the command of that vessel, which will be continued in the Port Phillip trade.

Captain Parke, of the Mary Nixon, has requested us to state that he is not going to the Chincha Isles, as reported in Tuesday's paper.

The John Ormerod, from San Francisco, has not spoken any vessels during the passage, and as there are no case of sickness on board, her detention in quarantine will be very short.

Saw the barque Gratitude coming out of Moranyga bound for Auckland, which vessel will sail in a few days for Sydney. Vessels at anchor in Auckland: J. Fletcher, barque; Creswell, Government brig; and brig Spencer. Spoke the Saint Peter, an American vessel, out 9 months, with 160 barrels sperm oil. Nov. 7. Water Police Office.—Yesterday, William Price alias Henry Morgan, and Patrick Downey, were brought before this Court, charged with being runaway convicts from Van Diemen's Land. Mr. Inspector Singleton stated that, from information received, he had apprehended both prisoners, who could give no satisfactory account of themselves. Mr. John Long Horsey, of the Principal Superintendent of Convict's Office, produced the Van Diemen's Land Government Gazette, containing a full description of two runaway convicts, and which answered in every respect to that of the two prisoners before the Court. Mr. Brenan ordered that they should be remanded to Darlinghurst gaol, with the view of their being forwarded to Hobart Town, to be dealt with. Both prisoners seemed perfectly astounded at hearing the minute descriptions of themselves, with the various marks on their persons, &c., read over by Mr. Horsey; and accordingly refrained from making any defence.

BRITISH POLICY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The intelligence from the Cape of Good Hope, which appeared recently in our columns, was of a nature to awaken serious apprehensions as to the immediate and prospective situation in which that colony will be placed by the disastrous policy of the British Government towards it. Nothing short of infatuation can have dictated the course that has been adopted; nothing but blindness to the most palpable consequences can be ascribed to the men who have wantonly reversed the immemorial policy of the British empire, in reference to the foreign possessions and dependencies of the Crown.

It is proposed to abandon the sovereignty of the Orange River Territory on the ground of the great expense which it involves in the maintenance of troops and of the necessary official machinery; and it is argued that as the extension of British influence over that important portion of South Africa was the act of the Governor of the colony only, and not the deliberate intention of Parliament and the Imperial Government, (though Sir H. Smith's proclamation in 1848 was confirmed at Home), there is neither injustice nor dishonour in withdrawing from an expensive and apparently unprofitable possession. On the face of it, however, this argument is fallacious; and the circumstances of the Cape Colony are such as loudly to call for the very opposite policy.

The interminable and harrassing wars of the colonists against the Kaffir tribes have undoubtedly been caused by our encroachments upon the lands over which they had been accustomed to roam; and there are not wanting men of station and influence who are ready to advocate the rights of the aboriginal natives of savage countries, as against the advancement of British power, and British civilization, which can only be effectually promoted at the expense of the barbarous inhabitants of those countries, at the cost of their savage freedom, and, too often, of their lives. But this view of the subject is not in accordance with the traditionary principles of British policy. Nor, as we conceive, is it in accordance with the highest view of the duties and responsibilities attaching to Great Britain as a Christian State.

Sir Robert Peel once said, in the course of a debate upon New Zealand affairs, "The weakness of barbarism must give way before the strength of civilization." In this brief and pithy sentence may be discovered at once a declaration and a justification; and we hold that Sir Robert Peel's view was the true one.

But, apart from the general principles, moral and political, which ought to guide the Government of Imperial England in these questions, the particular circumstances of the Cape colony render it of the most vital importance, both to Africa and to England herself, that no retrograde step should be taken. Passing over the obvious injustice and cruelty to individual subjects of the Queen, who, on the faith of the occupation of the Orange Territory, have ventured their lives, and invested their capital and their labour, in commencing the settlement of the country, we look to the ulterior consequences, and we shudder at them.

A retrograde step will infallibly destroy the prestige of British power; and it requires but moderate foresight and sagacity to perceive that the immediate effect will be to rouse the Kaffirs once more to an attempt at recovering their lost ground. If the settlers should retire in a body, the barbarians will instantly advance to our frontier. If they remain without protection and without Government they will become a prey to their implacable foes; and England cannot contemplate such a consequence calmly. She would be compelled by every consideration of duty, of honour, and of interest, to defend her people and assert her power at a tremendous cost of money and of blood. Another Kaffir war—more millions unprofitably spent—the perpetuation of hostilities—the retardation of religious civilization, — ultimately, perhaps, the destruction of English Government and the ruin of the whole colony,—would be the inevitable result.

In confirmation of this anticipation we may refer to the subjoined extract of a letter from Bloem Fontein, which is only too faithfully in accordance with the gloomy forebodings of the whole South African press.

"I regret to inform you that the Commissioner, Sir George Clerk, has declared that he is positively instructed to abandon this province, and that within a short period. You can well fancy the consternation which has been created. The death of Andries Pretorious, which is confirmed, has added to the dilemma. Sir George has, since the deputation waited on him, expressed himself more distinctly on the question of compensation. He says that he is authorised to grant fair compensation to all who have come here on the faith of Government, and a commission of persons acquainted with the country is to be immediately appointed to appraise property, &c., so that, in this way, we English may come out better than at first expected. In other respects we are thrown on the world, unless we stand the risk of bearing up against the confusion which will be sure for some time at least to ensue. We are not without hopes that if the Boers stand out unanimously, the measure may be postponed or modified. They can at least say you have brought us into trouble, and now that you have taught the natives to fight you abandon us all at once, before you have trained us to legislate for ourselves. * * * Had I been offered at the rising of the meeting of Delegates, held here in June, 1852, £6000 for my fixed property, I should have refused to sell, and now I shall be, I suppose, content with £3000. If Sir George is borne out, as I trust he will, I am certain he means well. He seems to feel for us. * * * We believe here that if a decided demonstration were made against the measure all over the colony, as well as here, it would be productive of good. It would be well if each district of the colony should give out its voice formally, and transmit the protests direct to England through any most convenient channel. You know * * * he was with me the other day, weeping like an infant. He is not in good odour with the anti-British, and justly says that had he doubted the faith of England he could have sold to advantage, and departed out of the focus of turmoil with plenty in his pocket, but that, instead of that the continued, as the English settlers were doing, to extend his investments. * * * I trust, therefore, all will be aiding and abetting. No one here seems to doubt that Natal will immediately follow, and that an awful war will be waged with the natives, particularly as all the troops with a small exception are to be entirely withdrawn."

The Cape Monitor of the 13th of August, has the following observations, which are worthy of the particular attention of every British colonist.

"This" (the proposed abandonment of the Sovereignty) "must be regarded as another of the misfortunes which have arisen out of the outrageous violence and bitter hostility displayed towards Government before and after the publication of the Letters Patent in 1850. To the proceedings—alike ungrateful and unnecessary—then adopted by the ultra-democratic party, Earl Grey himself has traced the origin and subsequent protraction of the war. His conclusions, we believe, are generally admitted to be correct. For our own part, we entertain no doubt on the subject. The prodigious loss of blood and treasure occasioned by the war has caused the British Government to adopt such measures as, in their opinion, are calculated to prevent all unnecessary loss and expenditure in this country hereafter; and one of those measures is the abandonment of the Orange River Territory. Whatever may be the immediate result, we cannot regard the ultimate consequences which may be expected to follow this measure as likely to effect the object in view. The first step which will, in all probability, be adopted by the inhabitants of that territory, after the official announcement of its abandonment, will be a junction with the Trans-Vaal Republic. A sympathetic alliance with many of the Natal and Cape farmers will speedily follow; and, ere long, a power will probably be raised up behind the Cape colony, which will attract the attention and secure the assistance of some foreign state. The loss of our mercantile intercourse with the people of the Sovereignty will, do doubt, be one of the first results of the measure in question; but a consideration much more serious than this is the establishment of an independent power in the immediate neighbourhood of this colony, which, at least, cannot be expected to entertain very friendly feelings towards us, and which, in the event of a rupture, would require for its subjugation an expenditure infinitely greater than any Kaffir war has ever cost. Had any discretion been left to the able and talented Commissioner sent out from England to settle this question, we should still have entertained a hope that his report might have induced her Majesty's advisers to alter their determination. But, judging from the despatches to which we have referred, we confess we see little to warrant such an expectation."

But, further, there is another consideration which strikes us as of the greatest importance, not to the Cape only, but also to ourselves. For the first time in the history of the monarchy, it is deliberately proposed from home that British subjects should withdraw from their allegiance, and form a government of their own; in other words, the Queen's Ministers actually invite the establishment of a republican form of government in what has been a part of the dominions of the Crown. We confess we look with apprehension and dismay upon the first inauguration of such anti-British principles; and we strongly and earnestly protest against it ab incepto. Time enough for the glories of a free Constitutional Monarchy to succumb to the principles of republicanism when the people themselves desire to throw off their allegiance to the Crown! But it is monstrous, it is deplorable, that such a thing should be conceived and counselled by the sworn advisers of our Sovereign, in direct opposition not only to the dignity of the Crown, but in defiance of the earnest desires and obvious interests of the colonists. Truly we have fallen on evil days!

TAHITI.

We have received a file of the Messager de Tahiti to the end of September.

On the 15th August the fête of the Emperor was celebrated by a grand official dinner at the Government House, when the Queen honoured the Imperial Commissioner with her presence. Illuminations, dances, fireworks, naval salutes, and other rejoicings, took place.

On the 26th August, the frigate La Forte, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Febvrier des Pointes, Commander in-Chief of the French Naval Forces in the Pacific, arrived at Tahiti from Callao. On the 31st, the Queen visited the Admiral on board, when she was received with royal honours, the yards being manned, and a salute of 21 guns fired. The Admiral entertained her Majesty at dinner. On the 2nd of September, M. Des Pointes hoisted his flag on board the steam corvette Phoque, and sailed (for New Caledonia) under a salute of 15 guns from the battery of Motu-Uta, which was returned by the Forte.

The Queen's youngest son Tevahituaipatea had died, and was interred with great pomp on the 21st September.

Admiral Des Pointes had been engaged, in May, in settling certain disputes between France and the republic of Ecuador.

The Smallpox.—The Messager has the following: "If our journal should reach any town where benevolent societies are established, we earnestly entreat them to include among their charitable deeds the sending of a supply of vaccine-lymph to Tahiti. The supplies received by our medical men were of injured quality and have produced no effect."

NEW ZEALAND.

AUCKLAND.

We have Auckland papers to the latter end of October, but our files are not complete.

The Provincial Council was sitting. A notice of motion had been given by Mr. Williamson for an address to the Queen, praying for certain modifications in the Constitution Act, in reference to the New Zealand Company's debts.

A motion had been made for commencing the proceedings by prayer, but withdrawn on an amendment being moved.

The New Zealander copies a report of the proceedings of the New Plymouth Council, but there is nothing in it of more than local interest.

WELLINGTON.

We have papers to the 15th ultimo. A grand ball had been given to the Superintendent in celebration of the establishment of the Constitution.

The Provincial Council was to meet on the 28th.

NELSON.

Dun Mountain Copper Mine.—The Australian and New Zealand Gazette, of the 9th of April, contains a prospectus for establishing a company to work the Dun Mountain Copper Mine, and which appears to have been issued by parties in England wholly unconnected with the lessees of the mine, and who are in fact ignorant of the position in which it stands. The whole thing is probably as pretty an illustration of the way in which companies are sometimes got up in England as ever occurred, and is calculated to seriously injure the effort which is about to be made to form a legitimate company to work these mines.

British and Foreign Bible Society.—On Sunday evening last, the 4th instant, a sermon was preached in the Wesleyan Chapel, Nelson, by the Rev. S. Ironside, on behalf of the jubilee fund of the British and Foreign Bible Society. After discoursing on the divine authority and claims of the Bible, from Isaiah xxxiv., 16, the preacher concluded by setting forth the obligation of Christians generally to support the noble and philanthropic institution which had just entered upon its jubilee year. The congregation responded liberally to the call, and the collection for the fund was nearly £5, which sum has been since made up.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT.—Thursday.

Nisi Prius Sitting.

Before Mr. Justice Therry and a Jury of four.

WALSH v. M'DONOUGH.

This was an action of trespass, for malicious prosecution, on a charge of larceny—plea the general issue.

Mr. Broadhurst appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Darvall for the defendant.

Plaintiff and defendant had been partners in a gold seeking enterprise, at Bell's Creek, and while there had used, among other things, a pair of gold scales, the property of M'Donough. Ultimately there was some difference relating to the accounts, as to which, and to subsequent events, the evidence was contradictory; but Walsh having left, and having appropriated these gold scales, M'Donough laid an information against him for stealing them, and not only took out a warrant, but offered a reward of £3 in the "Hue and Cry" for Walsh's apprehension. The latter, after having been absent for a considerable time in Port Phillip, returned to the same part of the country from whence he had proceeded, and was brought in due course before the Braidwood bench under this warrant. The case was dismissed, and gave rise ultimately to this action. The plaintiff and the defendant were both examined, and each charged the other with having been the party in fault in the dispute as to accounts. There had been a promissory note for sixty pounds given by M'Donough to Walsh on the day before the latter left, but according to the former this was extorted by violence; and it appeared incidentally that there were proceedings still pending, with reference to the assault then committed, or said to have been committed, which proceedings had been initiated by warrant on the very next day after the note was given. Another article which plaintiff had been accused of stealing was a revolver, which, according to his own account, had been given to him by the defendant. This, however, was denied by the latter, who relied as to the whole case upon the plea that as Walsh went away immediately after obtaining the note, and as he had, before his departure, appropriated the scales, &c., there was a reasonable ground for the charge which he (M'Donough) had preferred.

His Honor left the Jury to decide from the facts before them whether there had been reasonable grounds to justify a belief by M'Donough that Walsh had been really guilty of larceny, when he preferred the charge out of which this action had arisen.

The Jury found a verdict for the plaintiff—damages, 40s.

His Honor was applied to by defendant's counsel for a certificate to deprive plaintiff of his costs, but declined to grant any such certificate, the case being one involving questions of character.

DELOHERY v. TAGGART.

This was an action for breach of a contract to give possession of a house. The case had not terminated when the Court rose, and will be resumed this morning.

CASES IN TERM.

We propose under this head to publish, from time to time, a "Term Index"—or short abstract of Cases argued and determined before the Supreme Court in banc. For purposes of reference, we believe that these Indices will be found highly serviceable to the legal profession, and probably the public generally. We may perhaps at no distant date supplement these lists, by giving not the points merely, but a short note of the decision in each case.

INSOLVENT COURT.

Thursday.

Before S. F. Milford, Esq., Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates.

In the estates of Thomas Brooks, Nicholas Nelson, and George Lamb, certificate meetings were held, and the applications were granted without opposition.

In the estate of Moritz Mendell, a certificate meeting had been convened, but in consequence of insolvent's absence the only thing done was to adjourn the meeting for a fortnight.

In the estate of George Ray, a certificate meeting was held. The insolvent was opposed by Mr. Garty, a creditor, on the ground that he, being a person in trade, had neglected to keep proper books of account. Insolvent was examined on this point, the result of which was that the Chief Commissioner suspended his certificate for six months.

MEETING THIS DAY.

In the estate of Henry Bingham, deceased, a special meeting for the proof of claims, at 11 o'clock.

OPHIR.

7th November, 1853.

After a very long interval I resume, to give your readers a short account of the general aspect of this portion of the Western Gold Fields, which for a long period has been falling into disrepute; but for what reason, in particular, certes, I am altogether unable to account to you. For that there is the precious metal here in abundance not a doubt remains in my mind; but it would appear that the labour in procuring it is not so agreeable to the majority of diggers as that lavished upon other localities. Miners, even those who have been rather fortunate, seem to prefer a certainty to anything approaching to speculation or chance; and hence most of this class of diggers would rather engage to be employed at a fair fixed wage, than engage in gold digging on their own account, in an employment for which nature and practice have fitted them. For instance—and this is not a solitary one which has come under my notice—a regularly trained miner, who had been rather successful during the past month, making, with the assistance of his little boy, about twelve years old, during the last month, upwards of £100 worth of collections, informed me the other day that even with the chance of procuring nuggets in ounces he would sooner be in the regular receipt of fair wages from an employer of labour of this particular kind. Now, this miner, during the month spoken of, procured a nugget—a very handsome one—interspersed with pink-coloured quartz, partially water-worn, weighing about seventeen (17 ozs.) ounces. The locality from whence it was taken is situate upon the Lewis Ponds Creek, immediately in view of the crossing place, and in what is termed a dry gully. Close by, since that was found, a great many very handsome specimen nuggets have been brought from their hiding places, one of which weighed upwards of four (4 ozs.) ounces. There are innumerable spots in all respects similar to the one alluded to, upon this creek, as well as upon the Summerhill, which at some future day will, I feel persuaded, by an extensive observation, prove rich and abundantly remunerative to the steady digger. Among the more promising, in my opinion, is that situate at a place called the Upper Summerhill diggings. I was shown to-day a very rich specimen of exceedingly bright gold, weighing between seven and eight (7 and 8 ozs.) ounces; and the lucky finder had refused £25 for it. There might be about five pennyweights of quartz in it. This digger has been stationed at that place upwards of two years; and two or three persons who fancied they could do better elsewhere, after a trial, have returned within the last few days, and intend to "take the summer out of it," if they do not all the gold. "Sluicing," I am of opinion, would be the most profitable operation at these diggings—as well as at all dry diggings, where water is almost contiguous; as it is about all those yet discovered hereabouts, for seldom has the "washing stuff" to be conveyed a greater distance than the eighth of a mile, which, from the gently sloping ground to the water, might easily be conveyed in hand or wheel barrows.

The reduction of the license fee has already brought back many of our old hands; and at Ophir alone we have now nearly as many miners as we have had during the past six months upon the whole Ophir district, including the Mookerawa, the Macquarie, and the Burrendong diggings. At the first and the last of these places the great drawback is the want of water during the dry or summer months; for in the event of a deficiency of this necessary liquid in the immediate neighbourhood of the gold deposit, much expense is incurred in carting the alluvium—and few diggers can afford to pay the extravagant prices demanded by the owners of teams.

Your readers, no doubt, will not have altogether forgotten the accounts of the draining and working of two waterholes at Ophir—one of which partially was a failure, but the other very profitable: I allude to those known as belonging to Samuels and M'Intosh. Now, the first (which was not a profitable speculation in consequence of the repeated floods which intercepted the operations of the manager) is once more undergoing the operation of draining and working; and although little has been accomplished in the draining, a sufficient quantity of gold has been procured at the lower end to pay expenses. The party employed upon this waterhole is headed by the same individuals who managed so successfully the second adventure of Messrs. Samuels and Macintosh.

The quartz vein belonging to the Colonial Gold Company, favourably spoken of by Mr. Commissioner Green, in the report which appeared in the Herald a few days since, passes through this last mentioned hole in its course across the creek — and there is no doubt that most, if not all, of the large nuggets taken therefrom were formerly lodged in the majestic mass of quartz which may be seen cropping out of the face of the precipice some hundreds of feet above the level of the creek.

It will be very natural for your readers to put the question, "If the Ophir diggers are doing a respectable 'stroke' what becomes of all the gold, for we have not of late seen any returns of gold from that locality?" To this question I would answer, the gold is purchased mostly by storekeepers, and remitted through various channels to Bathurst and Sydney—not by escort, but by post or private hand, and therefore the major part of that received in Sydney as from Bathurst may safely be put to the credit of Ophir. I know that at the present time there is not less than 200 ounces in the different diggers' and other hands at the present time, and it is not unreasonable to conclude there is much more in "plant."

I shall endeavour to pay more attention in future to this locality, and report more frequently than lately the "sayings and doings" at Ophir and its adjuncts,—its valleys or creeks, were the Alpha and its hills will prove the Omega of gold finding in Australasia.

CITY COUNCIL.

That the report of the Finance Committee, recommending the payment of sundry accounts, be adopted. 11. That the members of the Standing Committee be re-appointed. 12. Balmain.—A meeting of the parishioners of St. Mary's, Balmain, was held at the School House, last evening, at which the Rev. Mr. Watson presided, for the purpose of forming a Parochial Association, having for its object the promotion of religion and education. The necessary officers were elected, and resolutions passed; and we have every reason to believe, from the spirit evinced, that success will attend its operations. We noticed with much pleasure the presence of the Rev. Mr. Walsh, who took a great interest in the proceedings of the meeting.

Picking Pockets.—William Pearce was on Wednesday detected by Mr. J. Cashman, of Newtown, while attending a sale by auction in George-street, in the act of drawing from his (Cashman's) pocket a silk handkerchief, and was forthwith given into custody. Yesterday the prisoner was sentenced to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for six months.

Stealing Wearing Apparel.—About 9 o'clock on Wednesday evening, Ellen Brown was given into custody for having stolen one bonnet, one shawl, one parasol, one comb, and sundry other articles, the property of one Agnes Barr, and valued at about £4. Some intimacy, it appeared, existed between the parties. On Wednesday afternoon Brown visited Barr, who, being somewhat indisposed, was lying either in or upon the bed all the afternoon. Before leaving she asked Mrs. Barr to lend her a shawl and a bonnet on account of the wet, which Mrs. Barr declined to do; when Brown left the bedroom to go home Mrs. Barr did not observe that she carried anything out with her, but a young woman who was sitting in the room below, through which Brown must pass to the street door, saw that she had a shawl, a parasol, and other things belonging to Mrs. Barr; she desired her not to take them away, when Brown took up a bonnet from the table, observing that she had Mrs. Barr's permission to take them, and went away. In consequence of learning this Mrs. Barr sought the aid of a policeman, who apprehended the prisoner, and traced some of the goods to a pawn shop in Druitt-street, the keeper of which identified the woman Brown as the person who pledged them for 8s. in the name of Ellen Phillips. Yesterday the prisoner was brought before the Police Magistrate, who committed her for trial at the Quarter Sessions.

Stealing from a Dwelling.—On Tuesday night, or early on Wednesday, a silver watch was by some unknown hand stolen from the residence of a person named Reynolds, in Queen's-place. The watch is valued at £3 10s.

Riding on Dray.—A drayman named Turner was yesterday found guilty, on his own confession, of riding on his dray in George-street, having no person at the time on foot to guide the horse, and was sentenced to pay a penalty of 10s., with 2s. 6d. costs. He was next charged with having resisted the constable who took him into custody, for which he was mulct in the further penalty of 5s., with 2s. 6d. costs.

Two of a Trade. — On Wednesday, Mrs. Ann Reynolds, a notorious resident in Castlereagh-street, was brought before the Police Bench, charged by Miss Margaret Humphreys, of Bathurst-street, having also a rather extensive acquaintanceship, with having wilfully and maliciously smashed two dozen squares of glass, with the two window sashes in which they were, when Ann was allowed to arrange the matter out of court by paying the amount of damage. Yesterday the ladies changed places in the court: Mrs. Reynolds charged Miss Humphreys with having, on the occasion referred to, and before the window smashing, assaulted and beat her. She professed to know nothing of it herself, but called witnesses who made out her case. On the contrary Miss Humphreys called evidence to support her statement that she never assaulted Mrs. Reynolds at all, but that the latter having unprovokedly assaulted her in her own house she pushed her out, when, she being drunk, she fell down the steps, and inflicted the wounds, bruises, and contusions with which the complainant's face was marked, after which she broke the windows, as before described, with a bat she bought of a schoolboy for 6s. The Bench found Miss Humphreys guilty, and sentenced her to pay a penalty of £4 15s. 6d., with 4s. 6d. costs.

Publicans' Lamps.—Several publicans were yesterday fined 5s., with a like sum for costs, for having neglected to keep their lamps burning from sunset of the 5th until sunrise of the 6th instant.

Church of England in the Colonies.—Without attracting much notice among the general public, a Bill has been introduced into the House of Lords which has a very interesting bearing for the colonies. The Bishop of Oxford is favourable to the Bill under consideration, which is intended to give synodical privileges to the Established Church, and to afford greater local powers. On the face of it all this seems perfectly fair, but a closer investigation shows the grave objections that may be urged. In the first place no such privileges are accorded in the United Kingdom, because they are opposed to the liberal tendencies of the age, which lean more to the laity than the clergy, and cause anything like priestly assumption to be most jealously resisted. The second and stronger objection is, that the colonies ought themselves to be permitted to act in this matter unfettered by home dictation. The friends of the measure affirm that the colonies never will originate anything like it, and in this very assertion we find its strongest condemnation. If the measure is unpopular, we have no politic reason for introducing it, and sooner or later its repeal would ensue. The Bishop of Oxford, being tainted with Puseyism, is sufficient in his advocacy to make low churchmen suspicious; but then the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Duke of Newcastle are assenting parties. You will doubtless be pleased to learn, however, that Sir James Stephen has come forward in a very public-spirited, and I must add a truly colonial spirit, to point out the extreme inconsistency of what the Duke of Newcastle is attempting. At the very time that the principle of self-government is sought to be inculcated in our colonies, we usurp a power that belongs obviously to the local parliaments exclusively. There are many anomalies unquestionably, and the control of the established clergy in our colonies is but imperfect. The advantages of the bill appear to be these:—Dissenters in the colonies make greater way, because permitted to manage their own affairs, and laymen of the Church of England should be allowed more participation. No power is given to alter the canons and articles of the church, and an appeal is reserved in cases of doubt to the Metropolitan of England. Certainly it would be impossible to do without a recognised head, where a church has a legally fixed constitution and formularies; but after synodical action I can hardly think the colonial church will be found to entirely accord with the church at home, and expect there will be similar results to those which ensued in Scotland, namely, a separation and Free Kirk. Sensible men meeting together will find many things to correct and revise, and will not become mere automata to meet, as the Duke of Argyll says, simply to exchange compliments. Lord Derby objects that the powers sought would perhaps be made available to deprive offending ministers in the colonies of their benefices; and Lord Monteagle thinks they will be interpreted to include the right of discussing matters of faith and doctrine. Writing myself as a member of the Church of England, I see clearly the difficulty of combining the advantages of a state establishment and those of a voluntary society; as is justly remarked, according to the habits of a community we must choose between the two, and partially bear the evils of either in consideration of the benefits. There might easily be local administration of the laws enacted by supreme authority, and this is possible without legislation. The laity of any district can discuss with their ministers about advancing the interests of their church, and, if they go farther, will be sure to be sooner or later in collision with the head of the establishment. Something, however, must be done, and, above all, the colonial clergy, being mostly licensed curates without benefices, should be placed on a better footing, and made less the humble dependants of their bishops. The same evil exists in England as regards curates, and an appeal to a synod might be useful. I end, however, pretty well as I commenced, viz., by expressing the views of reflecting and impartial men, that we must leave these matters of local management to the colonial legislatures. We have abandoned the clergy reserves in Canada, and to follow out the principle we must act correspondingly in secondary matters. The bill, since I wrote the above, is abandoned for this session.—London Correspondent of Argus.

FAREWELL DINNER.—A farewell dinner was given last evening to Mr. George Wilkie, by a large number of his friends, on the occasion of his contemplated departure for England by the Great Britain steamship. The dinner was provided by Mr. Johnson, of the Exchange Hotel, and exceeded his usual successful efforts on similar festive occasions. Every procurable delicacy was upon the table, and the wines were chosen only with regard to the excellence of their quality, and the rarity of their selection. The chair was filled by Mr. G. R. Nichols, M.L.C., and about 80 or 90 guests sat down to the sumptuous repast that had been prepared for them. This is the second time that Mr. Wilkie has visited England since his arrival in the colony, and on the occasion of his last departure he was greeted by a similar testimonial of respect to that offered to him last evening. Mr. Wilkie visits England principally for the benefit of his health, and his sojourn in the mother-country, under his present arrangements, will be short. Another object of his trip is to purchase machinery and materials for extending a large business, which he carries on in the baking of ship biscuit, &c. He was the first to introduce the application of steam to this branch of the trade in the colony, and in various notices of the visits of distinguished personages to his establishment, we have had occasion to call attention to the energy and enterprise which he has exerted. We are happy to state that this energy and enterprise have proved eminently advantageous to himself, and have no doubt conferred a corresponding benefit upon the community. The feeling evinced last evening showed that Mr. Wilkie in prosecuting the branch of trade in which he has gained so much eminence has secured to himself the respect and esteem of a large number of his fellow-citizens, and the most cordial and enthusiastic wishes for a prosperous voyage and safe return to himself and family. Of course the usual loyal toasts were drunk with spirit and unanimity, and as the guest of the evening is most appropriately, according to his profession, a native of the "Land o' Cakes," they were followed by a number of national sentiments and speeches, peculiarly characteristic of the convivial meeting of his countrymen. On the right of the chairman sat Mr. Wilkie, the guest of the evening, and on the left Captain Mathews, of the Great Britain, who with several of the officers of that noble vessel, graced the occasion by their attendance. The Chairman, in proposing the health of Sir Charles Fitz Roy, the Governor-General, dwelt with enthusiasm on the mildness and prosperity which had characterised his Excellency's reign, and concluded by remarking that although it was very probable his Excellency would not remain among them many months longer, yet it might be many months before they would get his equal. The toast was drunk with the most marked satisfaction. The Chairman then proposed the health of Mr. George Wilkie, which was received with repeated rounds of applause. In proposing the health of this gentleman he was sure they would all agree with him that Mr. Wilkie, during his sojourn in the colony, had gained the friendship and good will of some thousands of persons, whilst he would leave these shores without the enmity of a single individual. (Cheers.) If there was one man among them whose amiable and social qualities both in private and public life deserved their esteem and affection, it was Mr. Wilkie. He remembered when a boy twenty years ago, christening Mr. Wilkie the Master of the Rolls. (Laughter.) He had prophesied that his generous and noble-minded friend would in time become the white-headed boy in Australia, and in accordance with this prediction they could now judge for themselves whether he was not in reality a white-headed boy. (Cheers and laughter.) There was one thing which he would say without the slightest fear of contradiction, and that was that however humble Mr. Wilkie's sphere of life may have been, no man in the colony had distributed his charities more widely, or cultivated the social qualities of life more successfully, than him. (Loud cheers). He (the Chairman) had often applied to him for assistance to the poor and helpless, and be it spoken to his honour, he never once applied in vain. (Continued cheering.) He was glad to see around him so many old respected friends, who like himself ranked among the people, and who would not allow one of their most valued members to depart without doing him an honour which aristocrats could seldom bestow even upon their most important personages. (Cheers.) He had now the honour to present their worthy guest with a silver tea service, as a slight token of the esteem and respect in which he was held by a large portion of his fellow citizens. (Cheers.) On one part was engraved the Australian coat of arms — the kangaroo and emu, and on another the words "Advance Australia," and certainly no one has tried more to advance Australia than Mr. Wilkie (cheers). In the centre of all was the appropriate and simple inscription "Presented to Mr. George Wilkie, as a token of the esteem and regard of his friends in Australia. Sydney, N.S.W., 1853." This was a mark of honour of which Mr. Wilkie might well be proud—it was a distinction equal to any that her most gracious Majesty could give (cheers). He sincerely hoped that their guest and his family would long live to enjoy this mark of respect on the part of their fellow citizens, that their voyage to England would be as short as they could possibly desire and their return to Sydney as rapid as their friends here could possibly expect.—(Air, "Auld Lang Syne.")—Mr. Wilkie returned thanks in a neat and appropriate address, in which he passed the highest compliments on his Australian friends, and hoped that the time was not far distant when he would again revisit their shores and enjoy their friendship. Several other toasts were drank in the course of the evening, including the health of Captain Mathews, of the Great Britain, and that of Mrs. Wilkie and family, all of which were received and responded to with enthusiasm. Although the festivities were kept up until a late hour, the utmost friendship and good feeling prevailed. One circumstance which tended not a little to enliven the entertainment, was the presence of the Band of the 11th Regiment, which, in the course of the evening, played a variety of very appropriate and pleasing airs.

ROSES.—The following is an enumeration of Mr. Baptist's show of roses at the last monthly meeting of the Botanic and Horticultural Society:—Jean Desprez, Napoleon Buonaparte, Greaves' Musk, Madame Desprez, Duc d'Aumale, Hebe's Cup, White Fairy, Odorata, Mrs. Bosanquet, Charles the Twelfth, Lucida Duplex, Safronot, Thea, Robin Hood, Duchesse d'Angoulême, Duc d'Angoulême, Marquis of Ailsa, Viscomte des Cases, Earl Talbot, Mycrophylla, Geant des Battailles, Blush Province, Rivers, Souvenir de la Malmaison, Victoria Modesta, La Purpre Belle, Red Moss, Indica Alba, Giant, Queen of Roses, Cloth of Gold, Fulgens, Barrone Prevost, Amie, Vibert.

We have been requested by Messrs. Chattie and Hughes to notice the order of their sale to commence at their Rooms, this day, at 11 o'clock precisely, viz., books, perfumery, ironmongery, sundries, drugs—the whole entirely without reserve.

DISTRICTS OF THE HUNTER.

(From Wednesday's Maitland Mercury.)

SINGLETON, NOVEMBER 7.—THE CROPS.—The wheat crops in this district are in a most flourishing condition. In all our agricultural farms luxuriant fields of wheat are to be seen, and a few paddocks, whose growing crops were but a few weeks back condemned and eaten off by the cattle, show now every prospect of a good average crop. The alteration in the appearance of the crops generally during the last few days is almost incredible. THE WEATHER.—During the last week we had a deal of rain fall here, scarcely a day passing without gentle showers. One day in particular (Thursday) it rained very hard here, although we were informed that two or three miles northward of Singleton it scarcely rained at all. On Sunday night a terrific thunder storm broke over the town between seven and eight o'clock, and continued till midnight, when the rain fell like a cataract; the vivid flashes of lightning were awfully grand, and the loud peals of thunder were truly deafening. From the length of time the rain was falling, and the force and body of water that came down, we may expect a further rise in the river. TOWN CLOCK.—For some weeks past a subscription list has been raising by the inhabitants of this district for the purchase of a town clock; a great deal of money has already been collected for the purpose, and we have no doubt but that with a little exertion a sufficient sum could be obtained to buy a serviceable clock. But the question is, when bought, where is it to be placed? Every subscriber will, no doubt, wish it to be put up in his own immediate neighbourhood, and each one, like the currier that recommended the fortress to be built with leather, will have some favourite site; as for ourselves, we would see no objection in having one over our office, but then, the idea of living "under the clock" would not be agreeable! We hope that the parties who have taken it in hand will not study individual interests, but will, when they "wind up" the affair, place the clock in the most public place, so as to be most useful to the many.

CASSILIS, NOVEMBER 5. — These last two weeks we have had a most abundant rain in this district; this was much wanted, and has greatly changed the face of the country, as well as setting all the creeks running. The few paddocks of hay we have hereabout were, before the rain, as yellow as a guinea, and would in a very few days have been past help: now they are flourishing and green, and promise us a fair supply of forage for our nags. Yesterday we had a heavy shower at noon, since which the atmosphere has cleared, and to-day looks bright and clear, promising fine weather. Labour is very scarce here, and sundry flocks of sheep are in charge of blacks and their gins. Shearing progressing, though, of course, delayed by the late rains; 3s. 6d. a score, with rations, is what we are paying. If you have any men about Maitland with only one leg or one arm, send them here; the former will make hutkeepers, and the latter shepherds, while both are, fortunately, unfit for the diggings. It might be worth while to throw out this hint to some of the parishes in London.

BREEZA, November 3.—I am happy to be able to inform you that one of the greatest blessings which we can enjoy in this portion of the colony has been liberally extended to us, in the shape of the most abundant and refreshing rain which we have had for a very considerable period: the consequence of which is that our plains now look quite verdant, with every prospect of an abundant supply of grass during the summer, the value of which can only be appreciated by the settlers of this district. The rain, as far as I can learn, has been general, and although shearing has been in some degree impeded by it, yet that is of little consequence in comparison to the benefits with which it has been accompanied. Our township "in perspective" goes a-head. We have had a transfer of the public pound from the Mooki to this place, authorised by the Tamworth bench. We now possess every convenience necessary to the wants of travellers, in the shape of a well-stocked store, a public house, a shoemaker's shop, school, &c., and the impulse with which we are now proceeding will in all probability, in a few days receive a fresh impetus by the establishing of a post-office, which God knows we badly want. The matter is at present under consideration. We are badly off for men, in every description of labor, consequently for those that can be procured wages range high. So few shearers have never hitherto appeared in this quarter. The shearing must of necessity be protracted in proportion. In fact there are four or five buildings now at a stand-still here, for want of the necessary hands to go on with; among the rest a first-class stone house, intended we believe for a store.

SCONE, Nov. 3.—THE WEATHER.—From the date of my last communication, (the 27th October), up to last night, there has been, every day but two or three, heavy though not unintermitting rain here, which, with the three and a half days' rain then recorded, I believe is the most that has ever fallen in the same space of time, at this season of the year since the foundation of the colony. The creeks are all swollen, the country completely saturated, and the roads in a deplorable state from moisture. The rains in the past week, although very heavy, have not, as far as I have heard, destroyed any more sheep. The first great change from heat to cold after shearing appeared to be the most or indeed the only destructive time, the rain having been much heavier latterly than at first, I have observed the same on former occasions.

WARIALDA.—The weather is still very dry, although it often threatens for rain. Labour is still very scarce.

ARMIDALE, November 2.—The weather this week has been very variable. We have had fine sunny days, and the alterative of plenty of rain, sometimes accompanied with hailstorms and thunder claps. Business generally is very dull excepting on particular days. I am sorry to note that the observance of the sanctity of the Sabbath is not so strictly kept as it ought to be by the storekeepers here, with one or two exceptions. The diggers usually come into the town on Saturday afternoon, and return early on Monday morning, but the distance between Armidale and the diggings being only by a short cut less than 14 miles, it can easily be gained in two hours; therefore if they rise early in the morning they will have the advantage of not only attending the services of religion, but also of transacting their ordinary business. The meeting called to consider the proposed Constitution Bill was postponed until the 8th instant, in consequence of the extreme inclemency of the weather.

MONTHLY RETURN OF THE VICTORIA GOLD FIELDS.

	ozs.
Ballarat	35,169
Ovens	9,729
M'Ivor	6,2 0
Mount Alexander	105,058
	156, 66

The monthly yield of Ballarat, as compared with corresponding period of October, 1852, gives an increase of 7,481 ounces.

The monthly yield of Mount Alexander, as compared with corresponding period of October, 1852, shows the amazing decrease of 232,426 ounces.

The M'Ivor gold field has supplied 6,210 ounces, published escort returns, and one escort quantity not yet known; and the Ovens 9,729 ounces, for the month of October.

The total yield of the Victoria Gold Fields during October, 1852, was 365,172 ounces. The total yield for the past month, as shown above, is 156,166 ounces, showing a total deficiency of 209,006 ounces.

It will be seen that Ballarat is the only improving gold field. With the addition of two new gold fields, there is a terrible deficiency on the northern side.

The discovery of gold on the Avoca is likely to add considerably to the western diggings; and the intelligence from the Wardy Yallock, recorded in Monday's issue, will be read with great interest, being the first fruits of the opening up a large track of country extending from Ballarat down to the Cape Otway Ranges, intersecting the Colac district, where gold has been lately discovered.

Geelong, Monday, October 31.

DESTITUTE CHILDREN.

NO. VIII.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

SIR,—Having given in my last letter an account of Parkhurst Prison, permit me to commence this letter with an account of the Reformatory Prison for Scotland.

By an Act of Parliament passed in 1839, all the Scottish prisons were placed under the supervision of a Board of Commissioners. This Board consists of nineteen members, and includes three of the Lords of Session or Judges, the Lord Advocate or Attorney-General, the Solicitor-General, several noblemen, some sheriffs, and a few benevolent gentlemen. The General Prison, at Perth, has from the first been under this Board. This prison contains generally about five hundred prisoners, who are sent to it from all parts of the country, and who are sentenced to confinement for a period of twelve months and upwards. It was intended to be the Reformatory Prison for Scotland, while Parkhurst served the same purpose for England. At Perth the best arrangements were made for imparting a good education to the prisoners, and the chaplain has been all along most zealous and attentive in the discharge of his duties. Each prisoner received daily a liberal allowance of oatmeal porridge with buttermilk, barley broth with about two ounces of meat boiled down, and a portion of wheaten bread. The members of the Board received no pay, and they visited the Perth Prison by turns, once a month. I have been informed, on what I consider good authority, that the members have performed their duties in the most zealous and efficient manner, and that neither trouble on their part nor any reasonable expenses were spared, in order to reform the prisoners sent to the General Prison at Perth. It was found, however, after a time, and when the system had been fairly tried, that, of all the juveniles who passed through the General Prison, from seventy to eighty per cent. returned to crime, and that the greater number of them had been ultimately transported. This result might have been expected, and it was foretold by the few who had at the commencement of the scheme turned their attention to prison discipline. The late Mr. Brebner, of the Glasgow Bridewell, had been protesting against juvenile offenders being sent to him for six or eight weeks' imprisonment, showing the injurious consequences of such a system, and promising to reform juveniles if sent to him for eighteen months, when they are first convicted. But neither Mr. Brebner nor any one else held out the prospect of reforming notorious offenders in a period of twelve months. The authorities in Great Britain however would adopt no reformatory measures with juvenile offenders at the commencement of their career. Short imprisonments, whipping, and idleness constituted their treatment, and hence these juveniles soon became a depraved class, and the Board were under the necessity of reporting to the Secretary of State for the Home Department that they deemed the present law and treatment of juvenile offenders as failures. Destitute children and juvenile offenders can be educated and trained to industrious habits, and rendered valuable members of society in a short period, and at no great expense, provided they are early received into a proper establishment. In visiting prisons I have found boys thirteen years of age there for their tenth or perhaps twentieth time, in a month afterwards I have met with them in another jail, and then they were entered fifteen years of age. At the one jail their ages were as well known as was the age of Queen Victoria, while in the other jail they were inmates for the first time, and gave their ages fifteen years evidently to escape the whipping which justices can award to boys under fourteen years of age. These boys could not be as easily reformed as if they had been sent to a reformatory institution when first convicted. Having given in a former letter an account of the reformatory institution established by the magistrates of Warwick more than thirty years ago, I might have added that the Chaplain of the Asylum had lately submitted to the justices a plan or scheme, according to which all juvenile offenders might be received and educated, but that scheme was under the consideration of a committee, who had not returned their report. As that scheme seemed to be based upon a scheme which received the sanction of the State of New York, America, I may be permitted to give an outline of the Act of this legislature. On the 29th March, 1824, an Act was passed by the Legislature of New York "To incorporate a Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Offenders," which says, "Whereas by the petition of several of the inhabitants of the city of New York, it is represented that they are desirous of establishing a Society and House of Refuge for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents in the said city, and have prayed to be incorporated: therefore be it enacted by the people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, that all such persons as now are, or hereafter shall become subscribers to the said Association, pursuant to the by-laws thereof, shall be and hereby are constituted a body corporate and politic, by the name of the Managers of the Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquency in the city of New York, and by that name they shall have perpetual succession, and be in law capable of suing and being sued, &c." It is further enacted "that the estate and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by a board of thirty managers to be elected by a plurality of ballots of the members resident in the city of New York, being subscribers aforesaid.—That the said managers shall have power at their discretion to receive and take into the House of Refuge to be established by them all such children as shall be taken up or committed as vagrants, or convicted of criminal offences in the said city; and the said managers shall have power to place the said children committed to their care during the minority of such children, at such employments, and to cause them to be instructed in such branches of useful knowledge as shall be suited to their years and capacities." Another Act was passed at the same time empowering Judges to send prisoners to this House of Refuge instead of committing them to imprisonment in the State Prisons; and another Act was passed ordering the public Treasurer to pay a given sum annually to the Association: the Commissioners of Emigration were also directed to pay annually a given sum; and the Society was empowered to receive a share of the Common School Funds. Similar Houses of Refuge were shortly after established in other States. In the months of November and December, 1848, a deputation appointed by the Governor-General of Canada visited the principal cities of the United States to examine these reformatory institutions, and they say in their Report—"Of scarcely less urgency than the reform of the gaols is the necessity of some immediate action on behalf of the youthful delinquents. It is distressing to think that no distinction is now made between the child who has strayed for the first time from the path of honesty, or who perhaps has never been taught the meaning of sin, and the hardened offender of mature years. All are consigned together to the unutterable contamination of a common gaol, and by the lessons there learnt soon become inmates of the Penitentiary. We recommend to your Excellency the immediate erection of one or more Houses of Refuge for the reformation of juvenile delinquents. Such an establishment might be economically built on the Penitentiary lot at Kingston, and be governed by the same inspectors; but the expense of transporting children to so great a distance from the extreme point of the province seems to make it necessary that there should be a House of Refuge for both divisions of the province, one at Montreal or Quebec, and the other at Toronto or Hamilton." I consider that such a report as the above and the legislative enactments of New York respecting Houses of Refuge have particular claims upon the attention of the Committee of the Destitute Children's Asylum. In my opinion that Committee might with great propriety make an application for a Charter of Incorporation, more especially as they wish to check crime in its infancy. They might safely and securely calculate upon receiving the support of the community, unless Government came forward with some competing and better measure. There is no occasion to waste time in making any inquiry into the condition of destitute children. The causes of crime have been sufficiently enquired into already. They are the same in all civilized parts of the world, and the remedies must be the same. It appears that the services of juveniles are required in this colony, and it cannot be supposed that the Government would not be ready to give a Charter of Incorporation and support to an association who would educate and train the destitute children and juvenile offenders, and render them useful members of society.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

SIR,—With reference to a letter in your paper of to-day, signed J. C. W., we beg to state that no application was made to us for a plate for the coffin of the late Sir Everard Home, and had there been it would, as a matter of course, have been given.

After having admitted an anonymous charge against a body of tradesmen, you will not, we hope, deny this refutation of it as far as regards ourselves a corner in your paper.

Your obedient servants,

POLICE PROTECTION.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

SIR,—As I do not often trouble you, I hope you will allot a corner of your journal to a few words I have to say on a subject which is at this moment of alarming importance to myself and all my neighbours resident on and near that portion of the Liverpool road between Ashfield and Liverpool. The distance between the two last mentioned places is 15 miles, and one solitary constable, stationed at the Bark Huts, 5 miles from Ashfield and 10 from Liverpool, is all the protection the inhabitants have to rely on for the security of their persons and property.

The Sydney papers teem with accounts of robberies committed in and around Sydney, and the Parramatta and Liverpool roads have suffered their share of loss and alarm occasioned by a set of prowling vagabonds, who seem to select the old, the infirm, the female sex, and mere children, as the victims of their ruffianism. To such an extent have their depredations been carried, that prudent people on the Parramatta and Liverpool roads are transferring any portable valuables they possess to Sydney, to be placed in the safe-keeping of friends, rather than have them forcibly taken from them at their firesides.

The robberies committed almost nightly of late, in this neighbourhood, have been by armed men who are supposed to know the district well, and to be intimately acquainted with the premises of their victims, which they generally enter by stealth and in the night. In some instances they have been scared away by vigilant watch dogs, but in too many they have been successful. Every day brings intelligence of some fresh robbery, so that every man in the neighbourhood retires to bed at night under well-grounded apprehensions that he may be called on ere morning to defend his property from the hand of the spoiler, at the hazard of the lives of himself and family.

It seems it is the intention to remove the constable stationed at the Bark Huts to Parramatta, and to place on duty in his stead, two mounted policemen. Without for a moment meaning to disparage that valuable branch of the police, I submit that they are not the best adapted for putting down the evil of which I complain. The greater part of the way from Ashfield to Liverpool the road is fenced in on each side by three-rail fences, and throughout a great part of it, on each side, is a dense and scrabby forest, in many parts impervious to horses and cattle. It is no doubt in these scrubs the robbers repose during the day, and at sundown repair to the roadside, from whence they can pounce upon any traveller they please. The tramp of two police horses can be heard half a mile off during the stillness of the evening and night, and besides a vigilant sentinel will doubtless be placed near at hand to apprise his confederates of the approach of danger, and even although a mounted police might be on the spot five minutes after the commission of a robbery, or might get a glimpse of the robbers, the latter could pop through the fence in the twinkling of an eye, and bury themselves in a scrub, from which a regiment of dragoons could not dislodge them even in the day, much less in the night.

It is generally thought that the robbers mingle at times with travellers up and down the road, and at times call at inns and stores on the road in the guise of gold diggers or labourers in search of employment, and by these means acquire information of essential service in their vocation; and several innkeepers have observed the curiosity evinced by some of their suspicious-looking bar customers to become acquainted with the arrangement of their premises.

Three or four active members of the detective police frequenting the road for a short time would be far more likely to succeed in putting down the nuisance than the clattering of horses' feet and clashing of carbines, cutlasses, &c., attending the motions of the mounted police. So satisfied are the inhabitants of this, that it is their intention to petition the proper authority, praying that three resident constables may be placed on the road from Liverpool to Ashfield, and also that some of the detective police may be sent out to aid in the capture of the scoundrels who at present keep the neighbourhood in such a state of agitation and alarm.

I observe that some of the Sydney papers frequently complain of the little that has been done by the mounted police in Sydney and suburbs, in the way of apprehending evil doers. I cannot blame them at all. In the interior, which I know pretty well, the mounted police are invaluable, where they have a proper field for their duties, i.e., an unenclosed country, with places few and far between, where the bushranger can obtain food or the means of concealment; but either in a town, or a densely peopled suburb, free of fences, enclosures, gardens, and so on, a mounted police is, of all others, the least calculated to be of use in apprehending burglars or robbers, as the noise attending their own progress will often drown the sound of the burglars' tools, and as often announce his approach to the highway robber, and induce him to postpone a meditated robbery, or hurry to finish one already commenced, in time to avoid apprehension.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

FUNERALS AND UNDERTAKERS.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

SIR,—J. C. W., in a letter headed as above, and inserted in your influential journal of this date, makes the following sweeping assertion: "Although no undertaker could be found to provide a plate for Sir Everard's coffin, BECAUSE FORSOOTH the WHOLE CEREMONIAL WAS NOT PLACED under HIS DIRECTION." I beg unequivocally to state that, in reference to our firm, the assertion is utterly devoid of truth; we were not applied to, either directly or indirectly, to supply a PLATE for SIR EVERARD's coffin; and that had the application been made, we could have furnished one of any description, and should willingly have done so.

We are, Sir, yours respectfully,

JOHN HILL, JUN., and SON, Undertakers.

King-street, Sydney, November 10.

FUNERALS AND UNDERTAKERS.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

SIR,—In the remarks of your correspondent in this day's paper, respecting the funeral of the late Sir Everard Home, there is one assertion so untrue that I trust you will allow me, one of the accused, an opportunity to contradict it.

J. C. W. states, that no undertaker could be found to provide a plate for the coffin "because forsooth the whole ceremonial was not placed under his direction;" now, I deny the truth of this uncharitable statement, attributing reasons so selfish that I cannot allow it to pass uncontradicted.

I was applied to by Mr. A., the engraver, for a soft metal plate fit to engrave the crest of Sir Everard Home upon, but I did not give it for the simple reason, that I had not one; for although, I had hundreds made of hard metal, I had not one that would answer the purpose required, or I should have felt a pleasure in obliging all parties, notwithstanding your correspondent's opinion of myself and my unfortunate fellow-tradesmen.

As to the other part of his letter, I think he has answered it himself; but will suggest to him that, if he wants real mourners at his funeral, he will not gain them by uncharitable conduct whilst living; and as he calls the people's attention to the funeral of the departed captain, I will call his attention to the life of that good man.

Trusting you will give insertion to the above, I send you my name, although, I do not think it will be necessary to publish more than that I am

AN UNDERTAKER.

CAPE YORK.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

SIR,—The recent possession of New Caledonia by the French has called forth some very judicious remarks in your valuable journal, prognosticating the probable effects on British interests, sounding the note of warning against further Gallic encroachments, and endeavouring to arouse that energy and enterprise which is absolutely indispensable to the preservation of British dominion in the southern hemisphere, among the islands of the ocean, whose valuable productions are wasted by a savage race. Already we have a specimen of French colonization in Tahiti, and from the comparison with our own foreign settlements, few will deny that it would have been better for the world at large, and immeasurably better for the native inhabitants, if occupation had been made by the Anglo-Saxon. What is done, however, may not be easily undone; but there is still ample room for the exercise of our energies. The field is not exhausted, but the time is come for action. Your suggestions in reference to the settlement of Cape York seems the most feasible, and the first that ought to be undertaken. It is an enterprise fraught with incalculable benefits to New South Wales. An efficient settlement there would amply remunerate the capitalists in various ways. The most efficient of which would be the establishment of a staff of pilots for the Straits, who, possessed of a substantial steam tug for occasional use, would render this dreaded passage a common and safe thoroughfare for merchantmen at all seasons of the year, and in either direction. By this means, ships to and from Java, Singapore, Manila, and China would save from one to two months each way, which would form a considerable item in favour of the parties concerned in the present high rate of sailors' wages. This would also be rendered the quickest, safest, and by far the most natural route for the Overland Mail Steamers. They would be enabled to double the number of trips, with the same number of vessels, by coming directly to Sydney by this route, and going back to India the same way. Our friends at Port Phillip and Adelaide would receive the benefit by the steamers constantly running between Sydney and these ports. Doubtless some assistance, by way of land or money grants, or both, may be obtained from the government in favour of a company that would carry this enterprise into effect. But I will not trespass with further remarks at present, excepting to suggest that Sydney would be first and most directly benefitted. Is there not capital and enterprise in this city sufficient to establish "The Torres Strait Steam Tug and Pilot Company," and their own fortune at the same time.

Sydney, Nov. 7. J. L. S.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

SIR,—Given the weight of a mixture of gold and quartz, and the specific gravity of each ingredient, to find the weight of the gold. The following will be found, I believe, a simpler rule for solving this problem than that furnished by your correspondent of Saturday.

First, find the specific gravity of the mass. This is done by weighing it in the air in the usual manner, and again weighing it while suspended in pure water. Divide the weight in air by the loss in water, the quotient will be the specific gravity. Then proceed as follows:—Multiply together the weight of the mass, the specific gravity of the gold, and the difference between the sp. gr. of the mass and that of the quartz. Also, multiply the sp. gr. of the mass by the difference between the specific gravities of the gold and quartz. Divide the first product by the second—the quotient will be the weight of gold.

Take the case supposed by your correspondent "S. O. G." A mass of gold and quartz weighs in air 48 ozs., and in water 42 ozs. The sp. gr. of quartz is assumed to be 3, and that of gold 18. The sp. gr. of the mass will be $\frac{48}{6} = 8$. Then $\frac{48 + 18 + 5}{8 + 15} = 36$, the number of ounces of gold.

To those familiar with algebraical notation the rule may be more simply expressed, and in such a way as to include mixtures of any two bodies of different specific gravities. Let the weight of the mixed mass be (a), its sp. gr. (s); the sp. gr. of the heavier ingredient (h), and that of the lighter (l). The weight of the heavier ingredient will then be $= \frac{a\,h\,(s-l)}{s\,(h-l)}$

The specific gravity of pure gold is usually stated at 19 3, but 18 will be a tolerably close approximation to the sp. gr. of the alloy usually found in this colony, being a little above that of standard gold. I have tried a specimen of Victoria gold, however, that gave fully 19. The sp. gr. of quartz is found to vary from $2\frac{1}{2}$ to nearly 3. I have just tried a specimen of white quartz that I picked up at Balaarat, and found its sp. gr. to be 2.63. If we take 19 for gold, and 2.6 for quartz in the above calculation we get $\frac{48 + 19 + 5.4}{8 + 16.4} = 37\frac{1}{4}$ ozs. of gold.

In finding the gold present in any mass by the above rule, it must be carefully ascertained that the mixture contains nothing but quartz along with the gold, or something not differing in sp. gr. from quartz. If ironstone were present (as it not unfrequently is) the result would be quite erroneous. The problem, indeed, would be entirely changed, and instead of having a mixture of only two bodies to find the weight of each, there would be a mixture of three or more bodies. For such a case no rule can be given founded on specific gravities.

THE OFFICE OF SPEAKER.—Sir Robert Inglis on Tuesday evening gave notice of his intention on Friday next to bring under the consideration of the House of Commons the report of the select committee, and to move that, "whenever the House shall be informed of the unavoidable absence of Mr. Speaker, the Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means do take the chair for that day only, and, in the event of Mr. Speaker's absence continuing for more than one day, do, if the House shall think fit and shall so order it, take the chair in like manner on any subsequent day during such absence."

THE MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.—The general half-yearly meeting of this society was held yesterday at the London Tavern, Mr. Valentine Knight in the chair. The actuary, Mr. Brown, having read the usual account of receipts and payments, the chairman, in the course of his address, briefly stated the progress of the society. The number of proposals for assurance during the last half-year amounted to 112; of that number, 80, assuring the sum of £39,374 had been accepted and completed; seven for assuring £3499, had been declined; and the remaining 25, for assuring £14,050, had not been completed at the close of the half-year. During that period the assurances in force had increased from £931,028 10s. to £957,254 10s.; the number of policies had increased from 1492 to 1549; the income of the society had increased from £39,316 16s. 3d. to £40,524 18s. 5d.; and the invested capital from £199,155 to £212,800. He announced that the directors, having taken into consideration the great reduction of the stamp duties, had resolved not to charge for stamps on policies issued after the 6th of July. The retiring directors having been, with the retiring auditor (Mr. Reeves), re-elected unanimously, thanks were voted to the chairman, directors, and the actuary, and the meeting separated.

THE NEW SUCCESSION DUTY ACT. — On Saturday the act for granting to her Majesty duties on succession to property, and for altering certain provisions of the acts charging duties on legacies and shares of personal estates, which received the Royal assent on Thursday, was printed. There are 55 clauses in the act, and a schedule of tables and rules for determining the new duties and the value of annuities. The duties are under the care and management of the Commissioners of the Inland Revenue, and the act is to be taken to have come into operation on the 19th of May last. The term "succession" is to denote the successor to any property under the operation of the act. The following duties are granted to her Majesty, and are to be considered as stamp duties:—Where the successor shall be the lineal issue or lineal ancestor of the predecessor, a duty at the rate of £1 per cent. upon such value. Where the successor shall be a brother or sister or a descendant of a brother or sister of the predecessor, a duty at the rate of £3 per cent. upon such value. Where the successor shall be a brother or sister of the father or mother or a descendant of a brother or sister of the father or mother of the predecessor, a duty at the rate of £5 per cent. upon such value. Where the successor shall be a brother or sister of the grandfather or grandmother or a descendant of the brother or sister of the grandfather or grandmother of the predecessor, a duty at the rate of £6 per cent. upon such value; and where the successor shall be in any other degree of collateral consanguinity to the predecessor than is described, or shall be a stranger in blood to him, a duty at the rate of £10 per cent. upon such value. There is an interpretation clause of the terms used in the act.

A STRIKING SCENE AT VALPARAISO.—In a recent work, "A Narrative of a Journey round the World," the author relates the following:—"I witnessed this same night a most singular custom among the native South-Americans, which made a deep impression upon me. On returning home rather late, after accompanying some captains of my acquaintance to the landing where their boats were waiting for them, I passed a low-roofed house, in whose well-lit room music and dancing were going on. I tried to get a look through the curtained window, but did not succeed, and was just passing on when the door opened, and two men came out. A third one was just going to shut the door again when he saw me, and addressing me, asked me in the most friendly way to come in and be welcome. Always ready to see what I could whenever I got a chance, I followed on this kind invitation, and found myself the next minute in a flood of light, but in a very small room, crowded with people. Taking in the whole at the first glance, the room seemed rather poorly furnished, with whitewashed walls, only here and there ornamented with small and coloured pictures of saints and martyrs. The tables and chairs were made of pine wood —the latter with cane bottoms; and one corner of the room, and a great part of the whole space, in fact, was taken up by a large bed covered with flowered curtains, instead of a musquito net; but the curtains thrown back at present to afford room to the guests who would not dance themselves. Aqua-ardiente and dulces were handed round; while all, men and women, the dancers excepted, smoked their cigarillos. But the most remarkable thing in the room seemed to me a large kind of scaffold, which occupied the other corner opposite the bed, consisting of a light framework, ornamented all over with artificial flowers, little pictures of saints, and a quantity of small lighted wax candles. On the top of it, a most extraordinarily well-made wax figure of a little child was seated on a low wooden chair, dressed in a snow white little frock; the eyes were closed, the pale cheeks tinged with a soft rosy hue, and the whole figure perfectly strewn with flowers. It was so deceptive that when I drew near it at first I thought it a real child, while a young woman below it, pale, and with tears in her eyes, might very well have been taken for the mother. But that was certainly a mistake, for at this moment one of the men stepped up to her and invited her to dance, and a few minutes afterwards she was one of the merriest in the crowd. But it must really be a child—no sculptor could have formed that little face so exquisitely; and now one light went out, close to the head, and the cheek lost its rosy hue. My neighbours at last remarked the attention with which I looked upon the figure or child, whichever it was; and the nearest one informed me, as far as I could understand him, that the little thing up there was really the child of the woman with the pale face, who was dancing just then so merrily; and the whole festivity taking place in fact, only on account of that little angel. I shook my head doubtfully; and my neighbour, to convince me, took my arm and led me to the frame, where I had to step upon the chair and nearest table, and touch the cheek and hand of the child. It was a corpse! And the mother seeing I had doubted it, but was now convinced, came to me, and smilingly told me it had been her sweet child, and was now a little angel in heaven. The guitars and caceas commenced wildly again, and she had to return to the dance. I left the house as in a dream, but afterwards heard the explanation of the ceremony. If a little child, I believe up to four years of age, dies in Chili, it is thought to go straight to heaven and become a little angel; the mother being prouder of that—before the eyes of the world, at least—than if she had reared her child to happy man or womanhood. The little corpse is exhibited there, as I had seen it; and they often continue dancing and singing around it till it displays signs of putrefaction. But the mother, whatever the feelings of her heart may be, must laugh, and sing and dance; she dares not give way to any selfish feelings, for is not the happiness of her child secured? Poor mother."

AT LAST!—When things come to the worst, it is said, they must mend; and so, we suppose, when matters have proceeded to extremities they must end. Leopold George Duncan Albert is her Majesty's "last baby." We quote from Douglas Jerrold, but are profoundly ignorant as to how that gentleman obtained this singularly interesting piece of information. The Royal Annuals have so long been regarded as a regular issue that the public will feel a little awkwardness at first on so sudden a stop being put to these established periodicals.—Arm Chair—Melbourne paper.

TO MR. GEORGE H. BODE,
Late Master of the Episcopalian School, Penrith.

Penrith, October 12, 1853.

DEAR SIR,—We regret that circumstances, over which we have no control, should have arisen to cause your removal from this district, after a residence amongst us of thirteen years. We consider we should be wanting in our duty to allow such an occurrence to take place without expressing our sense of your efficiency as a Teacher of Youth, and the steady moral and respectable deportment which you have ever evinced in all the relations of life during your residence amongst us.

In the sphere of usefulness in which you have been here placed, we conceive that the exercise of your scholastic duties have been performed in a most satisfactory manner, and leave no doubt that your zealous and praiseworthy exertions will be productive of much benefit to the rising generation who have profited by your instruction.

Although of retiring and unassuming habits, you have invariably been found foremost to sympathise with, and assist in the cause of, suffering and distress in this locality.

Highly appreciating your character as a worthy member of society, and your merits as a teacher of youth, we beg of your acceptance of the accompanying Testimonial, as a small token of our esteem and respect.

Signed

St. Peter's School, Cook's River,
October 27, 1853.

My dear Friends,—In answer to your kind letter of the 12th instant, which only came to hand yesterday, I would beg leave to assure you that it was a source of real regret to me to leave Penrith. It cannot but be that, after so lengthened a residence amongst you, many agreeable associations will recur to my memory, much that is pleasant, mingled also with the painful. By your kindness I am assured that I leave many dear friends behind, many young persons who have entered on the cares and duties of life, who are, and who I trust ever will continue to be a credit to themselves and to their teacher,—many also who give a good promise of becoming useful and respectable members of society. I leave with regret too, in your churchyard, dear ones, whom I loved in life, and who in death can never be forgotten; but most of all do I regret the necessity which compelled me to leave. Believe me, it was not lightly that I took my resolve, but be assured that unless some energetic means are adopted for the comfort of the children as well as the master we shall have to deplore the total dispersion of the school.

With regard to my usefulness as a teacher, I can only say that it has always been my endeavour to do my duty to the best of my ability, through good report and evil report, leaving the result to Him who seeth not as man seeth, but who searcheth the heart. And here I would make so free as to offer a word of advice to those parents who are disposed to strengthen the hands of the schoolmaster. The greatest drawback to the improvement of your children, and a source of very great vexation to any teacher, is the neglect of regularity and a want of punctuality in attendance. Do not allow trifling causes to keep your children from school. The spring time of youth is the season for improvement; let that period pass, and your children, when grown up, will be ashamed, or, what is still worse, may be disinclined, to receive instruction. To my friends who send their children to the Sunday School I would say, persevere in so doing. Remember what Solomon said, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it;" but what said a wiser than Solomon—"Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." There is nothing so delights a Sunday School Teacher (if I except the consciousness of striving to do good) as to see the children Sunday after Sunday tripping with smiling happy countenances to their Sabbath Schools; and I can safely say for myself, after an experience of many years, that I never felt so amply rewarded as when my labours were thus appreciated. Pardon my thus advising when my object should have been to thank, but I was loth to miss an opportunity of offering a word in season. If, my dear friends, in my intercourse amongst you I have succeeded in any labour of love, or in the performance of any Christian duties, let all the praise be ascribed unto Him who worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure. In conclusion, I would beg to suggest the possibility of your having overrated my character and services, feeling sensible in myself of the omission of many duties, and the commission of many faults. Your partiality I fear has prompted you to overlook both the one and the other.

The testimonial of your regard I accept with unaffected pride and pleasure. I only regret that it was not presented in a more enduring form, "for riches will make unto themselves wings and flee away." Trusting that my successor may be equally fortunate in obtaining your confidence and esteem, I take my leave, hoping you may all become partakers of that happiness which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive."

I remain, dear friends,
Yours faithfully,
6201 GEORGE H. BODE.

ST. LEONARDS.
Spacious Villa Allotments, contiguous to the Dry Dock Company's Works, and near the site of the proposed Military Forts, on the North Shore.

BOWDEN AND THRELKELD are instructed by Mr. King, of Irrawang, to announce the sale by auction, at their Rooms, George-street, on WEDNESDAY, November 16, of his extensive property, Silex, situated on the North Shore, parish of St. Leonard's,

The near proximity of this property to Middle and George's Heads, where Military Forts are immediately to be constructed by the Government; to the sites of the great Dry Docks, wharves, warehouses, &c., now to be erected by the Dock Company in Great Sirius Cove; the consequent influx of inhabitants anticipated to that neighbourhood; and the intercourse and trade there immediately resulting, must give this sale a public interest, and an importance far beyond that which can possibly attach to the disposal of any other property in the parish of St. Leonard's, or in any other position in the vicinity of Sydney. The Auctioneers cannot, therefore, in fulfilment of their duty to the proprietor and to the public, allow the present opportunity to pass without noticing at some length the high advantages of this property, which is clearly destined (although now almost in a state of nature) soon to become the busy field of action—the permanent abode of present and future generations of men.

It is sufficiently apparent by the demand already existing for building land on the North Shore that, independent of other considerations, its elevated and healthy position is more generally appreciated, whilst its proximity to the business parts of Sydney induces the opinion that it will shortly become an adjunct to, or an actual extension of, the city in that direction. In no other direction certainly can it so properly extend. It is therefore scarcely conceivable how very little is known to the residents of Sydney generally, of the capabilities and advantages of that locality, situated as it really is, less than a mile from the Queen's wharf, and actually seen from almost every street in the city.

The depôt for the coaling of one line of English steamers, about to be established in Woolstoncroft Bay, is merely the commencement of a series of similar depôts shortly to be formed in almost every bay on the North Shore; and there is no question that small harbour steamers will soon be plying in all directions from every one of them; thus bringing points now estimated at miles off, within a few minutes' communication of each other, of George-street, and of the Circular Quay; since intercourse by steam, even on water, is confessedly more rapid and convenient than communication by good ordinary roads.

Land in the township of St. Leonard's, and immediately adjoining, has been bought and sold at upwards of £600 per acre, and is still increasing in value; while in fact, a very great proportion of the North Shore land is quite as eligible for the erection of dwellings as the land of that township, and will on that account alone soon be considered equally valuable. More especially it may be brought into view, that when the contemplated forts on Middle and George's Heads are completed; when the extensive works of the Dock Company, now about to be commenced in the immediate vicinity of Silex are in active operation, and when the necessary continual land and steam communication is formed between the city, the docks, and the forts, this property, in particular, to which the attention of buyers is now sincerely requested, will be rendered wholly available and requisite for the erection of buildings. Whilst its proximity to the harbour, and its position directly opposite Mrs. Macquarie's seat in the Domain, render it eminently accessible to the citizens of Sydney, especially to those in the eastern quarter of the city.

Thus a populous community must there shortly be congregated, and consequently with it will spring up conveniences and institutions characteristic of civilised society. Building sites on Silex, therefore, will soon be at least as valuable and as eagerly purchased as in any other position of the North Shore—nay, in fact, than any other part of the suburbs of Sydney. While blocks of land, of several acres extent, are yet to be purchased on the North Shore in an advantageous position, for a trifling amount, it is rather remarkable that parties in business and others who can afford it, have not, ere this, more generally secured to themselves and families a healthy retreat in that convenient locality, apart from the bustle of business, and the serious consequences of a fixed residence in the over-crowded metropolis. In order to supply partially that desideratum, with a profitable investment for money as well, this valuable suburban property, situated near St. Leonard's, lying on the continuation of the same ridge on which the church stands, almost touching Dry Dock Bay, Sirius Cove, and other landings in the harbour, has been carefully surveyed and judiciously divided into twenty-five villa allotments, of large extent, besides reserves for church, schools, &c.

These sections of land will be immediately submitted to public competition, and may in a few months thereafter be subdivided by future proprietors into building allotments, and re-sold at an immense profit.

The purchasers of such landed property as is calculated to yield a return by its after increase in value are fully aware that land in the suburbs increases at a more rapid rate than that in more central positions, particularly when vast improvements are going on in the neighbourhood. In this respect is the sale of Silex held up to the notice of capitalists.

The lots, in the order in which they will be put up, consist of besides reserves of sufficient extent for an elementary school, a church, a school of arts, and a library.

For the information of those who may not be familiar with the extent of an acre of land, it may be mentioned that the market sheds in George-street, Sydney, including the lanes between them, only occupy in the whole about ONE ACRE, and that a quarter of an acre even forms a large building allotment, measuring 66 feet wide by 165 feet deep.

The elevated position of this property, and the direct influence of the summer sea breeze, render it particularly healthy. The air is hence singularly pure and transparent, being free from the noxious exhalations of swamps, from the drifting of sand, and from the dust and smoke of the city; whilst its situation is lightsome and agreeable, and possesses commanding and splendid panoramic views of Sydney and the adjacent country in the most favourable aspect; — unequalled indeed in any other locality. In short, the landscape must be seen to be rightfully estimated. For the gratification of those, moreover, who have not had an opportunity of witnessing those superb views by actual observation, one of Mr. Marten's truly artistic pictures of Sydney and its harbour, taken from Silex, with accuracy and effect, is now exhibited, along with a large map of the allotments, which the public are invited to inspect until the day of the sale, at the Rooms of the Auctioneers, where lithographic plans of the property may now be procured.

To those who may be desirous of inspecting these suburban blocks of land previous to the sale, as marked out on the ground by a most respectable surveyor (a highly important consideration), it may be mentioned that there is a remarkably level line of road from St. Leonard's Church passing through the property towards the fort at Bradley's Head, and the sites of the forts about to be erected on Middle and George's Heads, along which carriages have been driven; or should it be desirable to reach it by water, the present wharf in Mossman Bay, Sirius Cove (the site of the proposed dry docks), is within a very short distance of Silex, as shown by the plans.

To conclude the sale the Picture of Spdney from Silex will be sold as the last lot.

Terms of sale—One-third cash, the remainder by bills without interest at three and six months' date. The land to be conveyed only when the bills are paid, or their amount may remain at five per cent. interest secured on the land. Conveyance deeds, and certified copies of title to be prepared by or at the cost of the purchasers.

The title is a grant from the Crown in favour of the vendor, who has placed the deeds in the hands of Messrs. Norton, Son, and Barker, Solicitors, by whom particulars will be furnished, with abstracts of title.

BOWDEN and THRELKELD (successors to George A. Lloyd) have been favoured with instructions to sell by auction, at the City Mart, 474, George-street, on MONDAY, the 14th instant, at 11 o'clock,

All that valuable property, known as Mrs. Mary Gardner's, a little beyond the Governor Bourke Hotel, on the opposite side of the road, commencing at the north-west corner of lot six, and bounded on the north-west by the Parramatta Road, being a line bearing south-westerly twenty-six feet; on the south-west, by lots eight and thirty-one, being a line bearing south-easterly one hundred and fifty feet six inches; on the south-east, by Dowling-street, being a line bearing north-easterly twenty-six feet; on the north-east, by lots thirty-three and six, being a line bearing north-westerly one hundred and forty-seven feet six inches to the point of commmencement.

Also

All that piece or parcel of land adjoining the above, commencing at a point one hundred and fifty four feet six inches, more or less, from the angle formed by the junction of Dowling-street with Missenden-street, being bounded towards the south-east by Dowling-street, being a line bearing south-westerly twenty-six feet, thence towards the south-west by allotment number thirty-two, being a line bearing north-westerly seventy feet; thence towards the north-west by allotment number six, being a line bearing north-easterly twenty-six feet; thence towards the north-east, by allotment number thirty-four, being a line bearing south-easterly seventy feet to the point of commencing in Dowling-street, being allotment number thirty-three, known as O'Connell Town.

On this extensive piece of land there are tenanted buildings. Fronting the Parramatta Road is a weather-board building, formerly two shops, let at eighteen shillings per week, but now thrown into one shop and dwelling, of four rooms.

At the rear are two dwelling-houses, let at 10s. a week each; and in the other frontage to Dowling-street is a building partly finished, for which 10s. per week is offered, so soon as it is made fit for occupation. The remainder of the frontage to Dowling-street is a garden, profitably cultivated, but in which other erections might be made, to increase the rental. There are two wells of water, so placed as to supply all the tenants.

This property is on the Sydney side of the Red Lion public-house, so well-known in the thriving and pleasant little village of Camperdown, or O'Connell Town.

Early possession may be given. The title may be seen and further particulars made known by applying to the Auctioneer.

UNCLE TOM, BRIG.

A splendid opportunity for parties requiring a first class vessel for any of the northern or southern trades.

BOWDEN and THRELKELD have received instructions to sell by auction, at the City Mart, on MONDAY next, the 14th instant, at 11 o'clock precisely,

The splendid clipper brig Uncle Tom, with all her gear, stores, boats, and other equipments as she now lies ready for sea.

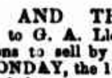

The Uncle Tom is a fine first-class brig, of 125 tons register, burthen about 200 tons, with draught of 8 feet water to 150 tons dead weight. She is now discharging her inward cargo of 60,000 feet cedar (at the Australian Saw Mills), with which on board she draws barely 8 feet, with stowage left for 20,000 feet more.

The Uncle Tom is of faultless model and build; and whether for speed, stowage, or passenger accommodation, it is believed that she cannot be excelled by any vessel of her class on the coast. Her length is about 90 feet, with 25 feet beam and 8 feet depth of hold; she has deck-house abaft the foremast for fifteen steerage passengers; and also cabin accommodation, on a most commodious scale, for sixteen passengers, independent of officers' berths and large cuddy.

Any parties requiring a vessel thoroughly adapted for any of the northern ports or Melbourne would do well to embrace this opportunity, as it is rarely that a craft offering so many advantages is to be met with for sale. Residents on the Richmond River have been very desirous that she should be kept in that trade, in which a very lucrative return is offered; but as her owners take neither freight or passengers in their vessels in that trade, they have resolved rather to sell her than undertake the trouble; and the only reason that she is now parted with is that her carrying capacity is found too large for constant employment by her present owners in connection with their cedar establishments on the Richmond River.

The Uncle Tom shifts without ballast, and can be sent to sea with a very small quantity, a matter of considerable importance if employed in the southern trade. She lies off Botts's (now Messrs. Sheppard and Alger's) Wharf for inspection, and any further particulars can be ascertained by application on board, to Captain S. D. Norris, or to the auctioneers.

An inventory of stores is in preparation.
Terms, liberal. 6191

YACHT "ECLIPSE."
The well-known Clipper Cutter, unequalled in the colonies for speed and symmetry.
For unreserved sale in consequence of the projected departure of her owners for Europe.

BOWDEN AND THRELKELD (successors to G. A. Lloyd) have received instructions to sell by auction, at the City Mart, on MONDAY, the 14th November, at 11 o'clock precisely,

The splendid Clipper Yacht "Eclipse," so well and favourably known as standing unrivalled in this port or any other of the colonies for speed and beauty. She was built in 1849 under the superintendence and direction of Dr. Atkinson, clinker-built, copper-fastened in 1852. She was coppered under the superintendence of Mr. Chowne, with 16-ounce copper, and received a careful overhaul in every respect to render her condition faultless. She is of ten tons register, and has nine tons of iron ballast on board. Her cabin is commodious, and embraces every possible comfort and convenience that could be effected in a vessel of her size. She is amply provided with sail and gear, having two complete suits of sails, one of which, including square sail and balloon topsail, has never yet been bent—they have just been completed by Mr. Carter, and are made on the American principle of lacing to the booms. She is also amply provided with anchors and every other requisite, and no expense has been spared to render her what she now is, namely, the finest yacht in these seas.

Through carelessness on the part of her crew she was a short time since run ashore on Garden Island, but the ballast having been discharged as she lay, she was floated off under the superintendence of Mr. Lord without receiving any damage beyond the disfigurement of her cabin decorations, which is of comparatively small account.

Independent of her adaptations for yachting purposes, she would be admirably adapted for the requirements of Government, or any other object where speed is a desideratum.

Any party of gentlemen clubbing together for her purchase would obtain her in time for the Balmain, as well as the anniversary regatta, and could secure in prizes a sum that would go a long way towards paying for her original cost.

She now lies at the moorings, Pyrmont, near the Australasian Steam Company's Works, where she can be inspected at any time prior to the sale, and any further particulars ascertained upon application to the auctioneers.

Terms: 25 per cent. cash deposit, residue by approved bills at 4, 5, and 6 months. 5217

ELEGANT COTTAGE RESIDENCE.
Delightfully situated in Stanley-street, just off Hyde Park, commanding a fine uninterrupted view of the Harbour, and facing the grounds of the University.

BOWDEN AND THRELKELD have received instructions to sell by auction, at the City Mart, on MONDAY, the 21st instant, at 11 o'clock precisely,
A beautiful little Cottage Residence in Stanley-street, just off Hyde Park, in the immediate neighbourhood of the properties of David Jones, Esq., Rev. Dr. Ross, and other influential parties, and adjoining the residence of William Buyers, Esq. This Cottage has the very large frontage of 26 feet, with a considerable depth to a street at the rear. The building is of a most substantial nature, the walls being 15 inches thick, and so constructed, that if desired, at a comparatively small expense, another story could be added, to make a large family dwelling. Both in its interior and exterior parts the house has been finished in a very superior manner, and quite unlike the majority of edifices of the present day. The yard is paved and well enclosed. There is a neat porch over the front door, and the house standing a good distance back from the street, has afforded ample space for a very pretty flower garden. It is now let to a highly respectable tenant at the rate of £140 per annum.
Also
An Allotment of Land adjoining the above cottage on the eastern side, and possessing a frontage to Stanley-street of 16 feet, by a depth of 67 feet 9 inches to the street at the back. One of the finest sites in the neighbourhood for the erection of a private dwelling.
☞ It is perhaps hardly necessary that the auctioneers should say a word in favour of this property, as any one who knows Sydney is well aware that the position of this cottage and building allotment is one of the most respectable, salubrious, and convenient, desirable. The magnificent view of the harbour, North Shore, &c., can never be shut out, as on the opposite side of the street are the gardens and grounds of the University. Any one who wants a nice little cottage to live in should try and secure this property, which, if bought only as an investment, would repay a handsome interest for capital, with the knowledge of its improving in value every year.
A plan is on view at the rooms of the auctioneers, where all further particulars may be obtained.
Terms liberal, 6322

EXTENSIVE COAL FIELDS,
Lake Macquarie, near Newcastle.
Day of Sale, TUESDAY, 22nd November.

MR. MORT has received instructions to sell by public auction, at his Rooms, Pitt-street, on TUESDAY, the 22nd November, at 11 o'clock,
450 ACRES OF LAND, situate at Lake Macquarie, and described as follows:—
450 acres, county of Northumberland, at Reid's Mistake, including a salt water basin and the gut connecting it with the entrance to Lake Macquarie. Bounded on the east by 50 chains of a section line bearing south; on the south by a west line of 80 chains; on the west by a line bearing north 69 chains and 35 links to the entrance to Lake Macquarie; and on the north by the south side of the aforesaid entrance to its intersection of the north and south section line bounding it on the east.
This land has been occupied some years by the present proprietor as a cattle station and small farm. The land is of first-rate quality, fit for gardens or orchards, and the distance from Newcastle is only 16 miles; but the value of the land is placed beyond a doubt by the fact of its being a vast coal field, which can be ascertained by intending purchasers upon application to the party in charge residing on the spot, who will point out the coal cropping out of the ground.
The present high price of fuel in Sydney, coupled with the increasing demand for the numerous steamers now running, and about to be laid on, to our various ports, warrants the establishment of a company upon a secure footing, for working these mines; and by means of flat bottom vessels conveying the coals to Newcastle for shipment, which could be effected at a cheaper rate than, as at present, transmitting coals from Morpeth along a tortuous river, influenced by tides and winds.
Plan on view at the Rooms.
Terms at sale. 6349

RAYMOND TERRACE.
Valuable Waterside Premises.
Day of Sale, WEDNESDAY, 7th December.

MR. MORT has received instructions to sell by public auction, at his Rooms, Pitt-street, on WEDNESDAY, 7th December, at 11 o'clock,
The undermentioned valuable Properties, situate at Raymond Terrace, on the river Hunter, the property of Mr. J. R. Houlding, who is about to proceed to England.
Lot 1.
STORES, SHOP, and DWELLING-HOUSE, standing upon a block of land having a frontage of 66 feet to the river Hunter by a depth of about 200 feet, with a wharf extending about 50 feet into the river, at which the steamers stop daily to land and take in a cargo and passengers.
Close to the wharf is a stone-built store, about 50 feet by 20 feet, with four floors, capable of storing 10,000 bushels of grain. Immediately adjacent to which is a capital STONE-BUILT DWELLING-HOUSE and LARGE SHOP. The house contains five rooms, with brick-built kitchen detached, with two servants' rooms, laundry, and other offices. In front is a very neat flower garden.
The shop is commodious and lofty, and for style and convenience of fittings cannot be surpassed. Along the front of the shop is a spacious verandah 56 feet long. Close to the shop is a STONE-BUILT STORE, paved with stone, capable of storing 100 tons of goods, and containing a secure powder magazine.
⁂ The above premises are substantially and faithfully built by experienced workmen under the careful supervision of the proprietor; and it may be safely asserted that no better or sounder buildings can be met with in the colony, or more compact or convenient as business premises. The buildings are all insured and fitted with lightning conductors, and stand in the best part of a thriving township, which is fast drawing attention, not only as the key to the northern districts through the lands of the Australian Agricultural Company, by which a distance of sixty miles will be saved to New England, but also as a healthful residence for invalids desirous of leaving Sydney for change of air.
The whole of the available water side allotments having long since been taken up, Steam Navigation Companies should not overlook this opportunity of securing a valuable wharf and premises; and capitalists have here a fine chance of investing money to advantage, as a property like this must eventually yield a handsome rental, and from its stability require but little repair for years to come.
Intending purchasers are invited to inspect the property, upon which they can be landed by any of the Australian Steam Navigation Company boats within ten hours after leaving Sydney.
Lot 2.
A neat VERANDAH COTTAGE, at present occupied by Mr. J. R. Houlding, situated in a quiet part of the township of Raymond Terrace, and containing four convenient rooms, with detached kitchen, servant's room, and other out-offices. There are also a flower garden and orchard, well stocked with choice fruit trees and flowers, to which is attached a vegetable garden.
The purchaser of this Cottage will have the option of taking the Household Furniture, Library, Musical Instruments, Kitchen Utensils, &c., at a valuation.
⁂ This sale offers an excellent opportunity for a respectable family securing a neat country residence, which has been fitted up at great expense by the proprietor for his especial use, and affording every comfort and convenience.
Possession to be given in January next.
Lot 3.
A block of BUILDING LAND, situate in the most valuable part of the township of Raymond Terrace, immediately adjoining Hall's well known hotel, having a frontage of 150 feet to William-street by a depth of 150 feet to Port Stephens-street.
Title to the above properties unexceptionable.
Personal inspection is particularly invited.
Terms liberal, at sale. 6350
